Brightbill Offers Wetlands Preservation Legislation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A proposal for wetlands legislation that has been offered by the chairman of the state Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee deals with issues at least one farm organization said must be included before it will reasonably consider it.

A public hearing on the 57-page proposal is to be held 10 a.m. May 8 in Room 8E-B of the East Wing-Capitol Building, in Harrisburg.

Wetlands protection has been an issue of contention with many landowners for many years, especially within the last half of a decade when federal authorities have been enforcing laws in an effort to slow down the loss of the habitat.

Among problems that landowners face are varied and unclear definitions of wetlands. Also, enforcement jurisdiction has also been a problem for landowners, since several different agencies, at the state and federal level, have varying responsibilities according to the differing regulations they are charged with enforcing.

In an effort to coordinate efforts, state Sen. David Brightbill, R-Lebanon, has introduced a three-part comprehensive wetlands protection plan aimed at establishing uses of wetlands.

"Pennsylvania now has no comprehensive wetlands protection law," Brightbill said. "The program we have now is not effective in protecting wetlands and doesn't give landowners the help they need to preserve wetlands. We have the worst of both worlds."

The first part of the proposal seeks to adopt the "no net loss" principle for wetlands protection; requires the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) to map wetlands, county by county; classify wetlands according to value of function; sets deadlines for DER's review of permit applications; creates a seven-member "Wetlands Preservation Trust" to oversee education programs and purchasing programs; doubles fines and penalties; and provides about $2.4 million annually for protection.

Debate Mired: Preserve Wetlands Or Rights Of Property Owners?

This is one in a series of articles. Consequent articles will examine how DER and the Army Corps of Engineers gained jurisdiction over wetlands and the process they use to review a permit, when farmers must apply for permits, and a farmer's story on successfully gaining a permit to make changes to his wetland.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "Existing wetlands regulations have allowed the state to confiscate our ground without any compensation," said Eva Foster.

Foster and her husband were planning to erect a pole barn and a poultry house to comply with township setback requirements in Chester Co.

The Department of Environmental Resources told them that since the pasture might constitute a wetland, it may be too close to a wetland to do any building. The Fosters were told to do delineation studies to determine if the wetland would be too close to the building.

Foster said that it would cost thousands of dollars to have the study done.

Since the Fosters can't expand their farming operation, and the wetland cannot be used for farming or grazing, they would like to move. But realtors told them that the property is greatly devalued because of the wetlands. One realtor said the wetland ground has no value, which reduces the value of their non-wetlands ground.

Foster said, "Restrictions on how we use farmland we own very clearly infringes upon our constitutionally guaranteed property rights, expecially considering that no such restrictions existed when we bought the ground in the 1970s."

From the property owners point of view, it matters little whether his land is condemned or whether it is restricted by regulation to its use if the effect in both cases is to deprive him of all beneficial use.

"Why should the government buy wetlands to preserve if they

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State livestock enthusiasts held two big events last weekend — the 20th annual Stockmen's Club dinner-dance and the 74th Little International Livestock Exposition.

Lori Cash of Centre Hall walked away with the all-around grand champion showman honors at the Expo last Saturday in the Penn State Ag Arena. The Penn State Block & Bridle Club sponsors this annual showing and fitting competition with beef, horse, sheep, and swine classes.

A sophomore in ag business and the daughter of Penn State animal science professor Erskine Cash, Lori was the champion horse showman with her yearling quarter horse.

Reserve all-around champion showman was Henry Zerby of Beavertown. He won the champion sheep showman trophy with his dorset ewe.

Barry Sands, a senior from Montrose, managed the show with assistance from Kevin Vandervort, Harrisonville.

This year's show was dedicated to Keith Bryan, an animal science instructor at Penn State. Having

Pennfield Profile

Sinking Springs Farm, Inc.

Half a Century of Dairying and Still Going Strong

When Marty Grey talks about farming, people listen. Especially if they're tuned into the morning farm report on York's WSBA-AM radio. Grey has been the station's farm commentator since 1979, when Herman Stebbins turned over both his microphone and his job as farm manager at Sinking Springs Farm.

The York County farm is owned by the Appell Family, which also owns Susquehanna Broadcasting, WSBA's parent company. The Appells started broadcasting in the early 1930s and bought the dairy farm in 1939. Stebbins was their first farm manager and held the job until he retired.

Grey grew up on a dairy farm in the Hudson Valley of New York and spent five years with the cooperative extension service in New York State as a dairy agent. He got his start as a broadcaster during his extension career, when he and a fellow agent hosted a live radio show called the Morning Milkhouse.

Although he enjoys his broadcasting assignments, Grey spends a lot more time with the Sinking Springs cows than he does in the studio.

"I like to go out into the barn after dinner and just spend time with the cows when nobody's around, no machines are running and there's nothing to take my mind off the animals," Grey said.

"I look at them and think about how they should be fed, how we want to breed them. I catch a lot of little things, too. Like a health problem just starting. Or a water bowl that wasn't cleaned out."

"Right after I started working here Herman Stebbins told me it's the little things that separate the top herds from the also-rans. And that's something we try to live by here at Sinking Springs."

A Family Affair

Deep cow families are one of the foundations of the Sinking Springs herd. One cow family is represented by four individuals in the milking herd.

Midge, shown here, classified VG-89 as a four-year-old. She had 29,480 pounds of milk, with 1139 (3.9%) fat and 966 (3.3%) protein.

Her dam, Sinking Springs Intense Matti, is classified 2E-91. Her latest lactation produced 29,210 pounds of milk, 1030 (3.5%) fat and 921 (3.2% protein).

Marty Grey said he uses every available breeding tool to improve the herd, including three different breeding services.

The Sinking Springs cows average well over 21,000 pounds of milk, and the herd has included quite a few 30,000 pound milkers. Grey said his breeding philosophy isn't really complicated.

"I listen to what everyone has to say about their sires and about our cows," he said. "Then I go out in the barn and I look at the cow. I think about how to improve her, I think about her family and her history. And then I decide how to breed her."

The farm's breeding program runs in one-year cycles, Grey said, and they don't work on improving more than two type traits at a time.

Feeding the Total Cow

When Marty Grey looks at a cow and thinks about her feeding program, he tries to figure out what's going to happen to the animal five or six months in the future.

"I try to take into account her body condition, how fast she's likely to drop off in production, any health problems she might have had," said Grey. "Then I try to figure out how to feed her."

Grey said he likes to keep things uncomplicated, as the feeding program demonstrates. The cows get 45 to 55 pounds of corn silage a day and 12 to 14 pounds of high-quality baled hay.

Total grain averages 22 pounds per day of Pennfield's PFR base and topdress to the 68 cows in milk, and varies from six pounds for cows in late lactation to 36 pounds for the very high producers.

"What's in the feed bunk is important," said Grey, "but I think one of the most critical parts of our nutritional program is water. Each cow drinks 35 to 50 gallons of water a day, and we make sure that she gets it when she wants it.

OPINION

Get Your Well Water Tested

Many farm and ranch families have questions about testing the safety of their drinking water. Even if needed, testing can be expensive and might not give you the information you need unless it's done right.

If you get your water from a public water system, it is already checked for most common contaminants. But if you live in one of the 10.5 million rural households with a private well, you are responsible for testing and maintaining your drinking water quality.

Most county health departments can help you with routine water testing of common contaminants such as coliform (fecal) bacteria, nitrates, pH and total dissolved solids. Testing for the first two items is very important, for their presence can lead to health concerns. Unfortunately, they are the most frequently encountered contaminants in rural wells. Testing for the last two items is generally optional, since they don't usually add much information about the safety of water samples.

Annual testing for coliform bacteria is relatively inexpensive and a good idea.

You should be concerned if any fecal bacteria are detected in your well water. Bacteria of this type are most commonly found in older, shallow wells in porous soils near faulty septic systems or animal feedlots.

According to the Alliance For A Clean Rural Environment (ACRE), nitrate testing is important and relatively inexpensive, but generally isn't necessary to do annually unless initial testing finds nitrates from home or farm sources. Nitrates in concentrations above health standards are associated with health problems in infants and young farm animals.

Radon and pesticide testing can be important also, depending on where you live. Both tests can be expensive and may require special sampling procedures. The decision to conduct these tests will probably depend on your level of concern or indications that a problem may be developing. An elevated level of nitrate in your well water samples is a good indication that you may want to test for pesticides, too. You'll need to weigh the possible risks of their undetected presence against the cost of testing.

To be on the safe side, farmers should have their well and spring water tested.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Be Aware of a New Pasture Herbicide

DuPont has announced the registration of Ally herbicide for use on pastures, according to Robert Anderson, Extension Agronomy Agent. This herbicide has some important characteristics. Ally has no grazing restrictions. In other words, animals do not have to be removed following application. This material has had excellent results on spiny pigweed.

Ally is generally considered a post-emergence herbicide and will control emerged pigweed up to 4" in height, but it should also give limited amount of residual control of other pigweed species. Ally shows activity on the following weeds: Garlic - less than 12" ... Musk Thistle - in rosette stage ... Canada Thistle - 6" to 10" ... Multiflora Rose and Blackberry - full leaf. Always follow label directions when using any pesticide.

To Prepare For Soybean Planting

Soybeans should be planted in warm, moist soil. A thermometer will help you decide when is the best planting date. Special bayonet type thermometers work very well.

The ideal temperature is about 62° F. The reading should be taken at about 8:00 a.m. when the soil temperature is stabilized. The thermometer should be inserted at least two inches in the soil.

Many people planting soybeans will either end up with too many plants per acre or too few. This will happen because they will use the pounds per acre philosophy which won't work for soybeans. Because soybean seed differs greatly in size, this also means they differ greatly in number of seeds per pound. For example, one variety may average 2,100 seeds per pound while another variety averages 3,100 seeds per pound ... that's a difference of 1,000 seeds per pound. So, if you plant a bushel of seed with 85% germination, that's a difference of about 48,000 plants per acre.

The only way to plant beans is by seeds per foot of row. If a grain drill is used, three beans per foot of row is plenty. If a 30 inch corn row is used 8 to 9 beans per foot is about right.

To Practice Pesticide Safety

Pesticides are very important to our highly efficient agriculture. When used as directed, they repay our growers with higher, better quality yields at minimal risk to our safety and health.

 It's important to choose the correct pesticide and application equipment for your particular problem.

 Be sure to read and follow the label directions. Make sure all co-workers do the same.

 Without fail, use the recommended personal protective equipment to prevent contact with chemicals.

 Mix accurately and carefully. Clean up spills. Return unused materials to safe storage.

 Triple rinse and drain empty containers into spray tank.

 Clean the equipment when you have finished. Don't smoke or eat until you have washed and changed clothing.

 Store pesticides in their original labeled container in a locked cabinet.

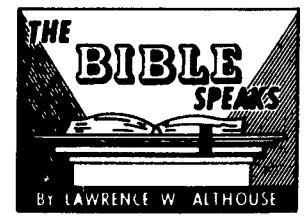
To Check Farm Ponds

Many ponds are showing both algae and weed infestation build-up and as the weather warms up, these pond plants will begin to grow. Permits are needed in order to use the proper material, and to protect livestock downstream from the pond. Before any ponds are treated in Pennsylvania with any chemical or fertilizer, the owner should obtain a permit from the Pennsylvania Fish Commission. Application for the permit is available from the Pennsylvania Waterway Patrol Office or from your Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.



MAKING SUFFERING WORK FOR YOU!
April 28, 1991

Background Scripture: 2 Corinthians 1:1-11.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 4:25-32.

Christianity has sometimes been accused by critics of being obsessed with suffering. I will acknowledge that some cathedrals and churches I have visited do seem rather morbid and some expressions of Christianity do tend to focus on the gloomy side of life.

Actually, despite those exceptions, I believe the gospel of Jesus Christ is much more about victory than it is about suffering. To be sure, it is often victory in spite of suffering or victory through suffering. But the emphasis of the gospels, I believe, is on the victory.

Christianity deals with suffering, not because it cherishes, but because suffering is part of everyone's life to some degree. No one ultimately or entirely escapes this experience. So Christianity has traditionally dealt with the question not of whether we shall suffer, but how. There is something distinctive about the Christian experience of suffering.

This is what Paul is concerned with in his second letter to the church at Corinth. Apparently Paul has been in some affliction which is well known to his readers — although not to us. He did not go seeking this trouble, but it came to him because he remained faithful to his God- given mission. Yet, even though he didn't seek this affliction, he learned something from it.

I have never believed that God sends us suffering so that we might grow in grace, as some suggest. Nevertheless, I think that God can often use our experience of suffering to help us grow in love and faith. I know a man whose son has been in one mental hospital or jail after another throughout almost all his life. I don't believe God caused this state of affairs so that the man would grow in grace. But, I do believe that God has been able to teach this man much in the midst of this painful experience so that he has been able to minister to others.

That's what Paul is saying in his letter to Corinth, speaking of the "God who comforts us in all our affliction so that we may be able to comfort those who are in any affliction, with the comfort with which we ourselves are comforted by God" (1:4). One thing positive that can come out of our own suffering is the experience of God's comfort. Paul says, "Why, we felt that we had received the sentence of death; but that was to make us rely not on ourselves but on God who raises the dead " (1:9).

So, we can learn faith in the midst of suffering. Teilhard de Chardin, the paleontologist-priest, experienced this and wrote, "I knew with a unique experiential certainty that I would never again rely for support on anything save your own divine stability". Suffering can bring us face to face with God. And from the encounter with the living God we can move out to bring comfort to others. Suffering causes us pain, anxiety, despair, frustration, humiliation and much more. But, by the grace of God, our lemons can be turned into lemonade.

Only Farm Credit Has Loan Officers Who Were Trained In The Field.

While you were growing up on the farm going to 4-H, FFA, maybe even AG school, do you know what your Farm Credit loan officer was doing?

Same thing.

Not many bankers can say that.

True, they can make loans nine ways to Sunday. But, now your Farm Credit loan officer can, too. Over the last few years our people have gone through extensive training at making every kind of farm loan imaginable. Now a Farm Credit loan officer can give you the lowdown on rates, options and creative financing as well as any city banker can.

And around here, our Farm Credit loan officers have the power of approval that's equal to most bank presidents.

So the next time you need to get a farm loan, think about this for just a moment.

Then let one of our Farm Credit loan officers prove to you what we've been saying all along. That bankers can't be farmers. But farmers can be bankers.

Many Hearing Problems Can Be Helped.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample send your name, address, and phone number today to: Department 20190, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Discover Oil On Your Farm

Today, many pork producers are adding energy to swine diets in the form of fat or oil to boost performance and reduce feed dust.

Local processing of soybeans by the INSTA-PRO extrusion method removes none of the nutrient rich oil.

TRIPLE "F" ProKcal and Energy Balancer Base Mixes combined with extruded soybeans and homegrown grains properly balance swine diets for maximum profit and performance.

Preserve Wetlands Or Rights

can force the landowner to preserve it?" asked Foster.

"Frankly, all I can do with the ground is pay taxes, mortgage payments, and insurance fees for it," she said. "That's not fair."

The Federal Swamp and Land Act of 1849 allowed individuals to obtain wetlands free from the government if they drained and converted the land into something more useful. Until 1972, the government cost-shared the farmer's expense to turn the "waste land" into productive agricultural lands.

But that has changed. Wetlands are no longer considered useless. They help purify surface water and ground water. Wetlands help prevent flooding by acting as a sponge to absorb storm water, and they provide habitats for endangered plants and animals.

"Frankly, all I can do with the ground is pay taxes, mortgage payments, and insurance fees for it," she said. "That's not fair."

While farmers agree that wetlands do have value and should have some protection, many do not believe the farmer should suffer economically because enviromental and regulatory groups insist that wetlands need to be protected no matter what the consequences.

They refer to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States: No person shall be... deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

The purpose of amendment was to bar the government from forcing some people alone to bear public burdens that should be borne by the public as a whole.

Foster said, "For the farmer who already owns the ground and is suddenly deprived of its use, the DER regulations are an out-and-out confiscation of property without compensation."

They refer to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States: No person shall be... deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

In 1978, a Meadville couple purchased 127 acres of land. When the husband died, his wife was left with a substantial morgage payment. When she tried to sell the land, a wetland delineation stated that 90 percent of the property was a wetland, even though no surface water existed. The surviving spouse is now faced with a continuing mortgage and annual taxes on land that she cannot use and will not be able to sell as long as current regulations remain in effect.

PFA calls Pennsylvania's current wetland regulatory program a bureaucratic nightmare. Permits needed to utilize wetlands can take up to one year to process (more than 13 different bureaus and agencies are authorized to review a permit application).

State requirements are tougher than federal requirements when it comes to wetlands. No matter how large or small a wet area is, a state permit is required by DER for any activity in a wetland. Permit approval must be otained from both the Army Corps of Engineers and DER. Applicants often complain that agencies give contradictory advice. Of further complications, The Environmental Protection Agency under the authority of the Clean Water Act can veto permit approvals.

Tom Filip of U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said that the Corps issued 4,500 permits in 1989 and denied only 11. But farmers say they are often forced to drop their applications because they know it will be denied or that the process doesn't seem worth the hazzle or the paperwork or that it is too costly to do the studies.

Such was the case of an Erie farmer who wanted to use water from his wetlands as a secondary source to irrigate his strawberry crops. DER told him that he would need to present a "mitigation" plan to offset the loss of wetlands.

The farmer dropped his plans when he realized the process was too costly and his application would be denied anyway.

Paul and Mark Miller of Elizabethtown decided to withdraw their application also. The two brothers operate a dairy and poultry business on their 85-acre farm. Since the pasture has a few wet areas, the farmers wanted to install a water trough to tap in water for the cows in the pasture. It was less than one-half acre in a 12-acre pasture.

Two years ago the Millers worked with the Soil Conservation Office to have a plan submitted to DER, Corps, and the Fish Commission. The Corps designated a larger area of wetlands than Der.

"It seemed at that time that no one really knew the answers, that it was too complicated a process to continue," Miller said.

PFA calls Pennsylvania's current wetland regulatory program a bureaucratic nightmare. Permits needed to utilize wetlands can take up to one year to process (more than 13 different bureaus and agencies are authorized to review a permit application).

Consequently, they dropped the application. Miller said, "We see value on having some type of regulation, but the approval process should definitely be more streamlined."

Although the Millers aren't asking to be reimbursed for wetlands on their land, they don't believe that small plots of wetland have that much value to the environment; therefore, small parcels should not be designated as wetlands.

There is another reason, farmers drop their applications. Take the case of Robert Brenneman from Strasburg who got a permit from DER for the plan worked out by the Soil Conservation District. Brenneman said he started his application two years ago. The Corps did not issue a permit to him, but neither did they say "no."

The frustration of waiting and the red tape caused Brenneman to write a letter to the Corps demanding a yes or a no by the fall of 1990. The Corps did not respond.

"The work would have improved the water quality and made it much easier for use to keep it looking nice," Brenneman said.

He had a spring on his property that he wanted to use to pipe water to the meadow for the cows. Twenty-five years ago a waterway had been installed, but the upkeep had deterioted. The Corps would not allow Brenneman to repair it. According to the Corps interpretation, the wetlands on the farm was twice as much as the Soil Conservation District had assigned.

"They made my lawn a wetland," said a perplexed Brenneman. "We've been mowing the lawn for 50 years and there is no wildlife plants or animals growing there."

A farmer's livelihood depends on how he can use his property. Farmers whose farming practices have conflicted with present wetland legislation are asking Congress to come to their defense.

Congressman Tom Ridge of Pennsylvania and Congressman Jimmy Hayes of Louisiana have introduced the H.R. 1330 Ridge-Hayes proposal for federal wetland changes. On the state level, Senator David Brightbill of Lebanon and chairman of the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee, introduced a 3-part wetland protection plan called the Brightbill/Hess proposal that has been introduced for discussion.

The Brightbill legislation would give a specific time frame for permit decisions, would give a minimum acreage requirement, would allow agricultural waivers, would not give primacy for DER, and would allow public input on exceptional value wetland designations.

While the Brightbill/Hess proposal attempts to put an end to "the bureacratic nightmare," some farmers claim that it does not protect the farmer enough. The Pennsylvania Landowners Association, an outgrowth of a coaliton of landowners supporting private land ownership, supports the federal proposal but not the state proposal. (Refer to chart for a comparison of the two proposals).

Lorraine Bucklin of the PLA said that while the Brightbill/Hess proposal begins to address the issue of constructive confiscation, it does not go far enough and leaves too many details to be determined by later regulations. The burden is on the landholder to prove all aspects of the law to get any compensation. This process is bound to be long, costly, and contested at every juncture by DER. The burden should be on the DER and the state to prove it does not owe the landowner full compensation whenever a permit is denied or some condition imposed.

"A fair wetlands protection program must balance both public interest and private rights."

What Is The Pennsylvania Landowners Association?

The PENNSYLVANIA LANDOWNERS ASSOCIATION is a network of landowners working together to protect property rights and economic opportunity while promoting responsible environmental stewardship on a state and national level.

- The Association supports the concept of preserving wetlands that truly have environmental value, but they believe the Constitution requires the government to compensate the landowner at fair market value.
- As far as endangered species they believe that no species is as valuable as the human species. When the loss of a particular species poses a threat to society sufficient to warrant restrictions on the use of privately owned land, then the entire threatened society should pay the landowner for the loss of use of the land.
- They encourage voluntary conservation practices and support federal incentives that promote voluntary participation in Conservation Easement programs. They oppose conservation easements by government agencies as mitigation devices or conditions attached to the permitting process. They believe the attachment of Conservation Easements to farmland repossed by the federal government is especially onerous. The practice not only removes the most productive farmland from the agricultural community, it also reduces the local tax base forcing tax increases upon other landowners.
- They are concerned about all legislation that diminishes the entrepreneurial creativity of individuals who participate in the free enterprise system, or infringes upon the rights of those individuals to own and use their property at its most productive capacity.

PLA Analysis Of Federal And State Wetland Legislative Proposals

H.R. 1330/Ridge-Hayes	Brightbill/Hess
1. Provides mandatory compensation for type "A" wetlands (exceptional value) as well as mandatory compensation for any permit denial in a class "B" wetland where a permit must first be secured.	1. No mandatory compensation provided for exceptional value wetlands or for permit denials.
2. Legislative definition given to wetlands rather than a regulatory definition. Surface water must be present for 21 consecutive days, as well as obligate or water dependent plants being found on site.	2. Will follow regulatory definition currently in place until legislative definition is obtained. This may cause problems if state mapping occurs prior to federal definition being implemented.
3. Place limits on permit fees.	3. No permit fee limits.
4. Places wetland authority with one federal agency, the Army Corps of Engineers, to eliminate interagency contradictions.	4. Does not delegate one sole state agency to handle the state program. State law should eliminate the PA Fish Commission from having regulatory authority over wetlands.
5. Defines in law what constitutes "Normal farming and silviculture practices."	5. Does not define what constitutes "normal farming."
6. Federal bill states the need to address the health hazards of wetlands, as well as the benefits.	6. State bill only promotes education regarding wetland values.
	7. State bill should contain a provision mandating that state law cannot be more stringent than federal law.

WHY GEMINI™ IS USED BY MORE PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS THAN ANY OTHER SOYBEAN BROADLEAF HERBICIDE

Excellent fit for Soil Incorporation with a grass herbicide (Dual™, Treflan™, Lasso™ or Command™). Soil incorporation is the best way to use Gemini™ due to substantially reduced rainfall needs for activation, resulting in more consistent control by preplant incorporation.

Predictable and not unpredictable recropping — No minimum 15" rainfall restriction between application and October — to knock you out of the option of corn planting next year. With Gemini there is no carryover to corn, barley or wheat on pH 6.8 or less regardless of the weather.
Gemini™ is 4 months, (the same as Lorox™) and not 11 months recrop to Barley.

Labeled for all 5 morningglory species and not just 3 morningglory species. Gemini incorporated with Treflan™ is simply the best for controlling annual morningglory and is second to none on cocklebur, Jimsonweed and velvetleaf.

More added no-till burndown activity especially when control of marestail is important.

Gemini™ works consistently on Ragweed and Lambsquarters because of its unique combination of Chlorimurom Ethyl and Linuron. Gemini™ is a no soft spot herbicide providing a broad spectrum control, because it's simply two herbicides in one. No need to add Lorox™ to Gemini™ for added control.

Performance and recropping options make Gemini™ the #1 Choice in Pennsylvania.

Miller Egg Ranch Solves Odor Problem

AGNES R. SMITH
Northampton Correspondent

EAST BANGOR (Northampton Co.)— City folks want to live in the country until offensive odors spoil their dream. Miller's Egg Ranch located on the outskirts of East Bangor has been able to solve this problem.

Donald and Ethel Miller purchased the farm in 1952. The poultry farm was quite small and Ethel remembers gathering 29 eggs the first day. The poultry house held 1200 birds and everything was done by hand.

The first automatic building was erected in 1969 . A 7ft sloping wire mesh floor was put over a deep pit. The idea of using pits started in England according to Miller. The ventilator fans were to go in the side of the building with the air blowing across the chickens. The problem encountered using this method was the Nitrate gas from the manure rose up causing a health hazard for the birds. To solve this problem 5 exhaust fans were placed in the pit area. The moving air dried the manure and made the whole operation almost odorless.

The second automatic building was added in 1974 when their son Leslie was taken in as a partner. The White H & N Leghorn chickens now number 15,800. Brown eggs are in great demand so 1200 Sexsalnik variety were added. The Millers' have discovered by putting matured layers in with the pullets it creates a calming effect on the young birds.

The eggs are sold from a self service refrigerator located in the egg grading room. Mrs. Miller grades eggs as well as oversees sales. She also helps out with all the bookkeeping,housework and etc. Thats a catch all title a farm wife understands.

The Millers' have restaurants, local stores, road side stands and one market in New York City who regularly buys their eggs. The surplus eggs are taken to Hackettstown, N J. on Mondays.

Miller farms approximately 1200 acres of continuous corn. He no-tills and only rotates the maturity varieties. When the corn is harvested and brought in from the field it is put through a grain cleaner machine before drying. The building used in corn storage holds 37,000 bu. which usually gets filled each year. The screening fines are used in feeding 170 head of beef animals raised on the farm.

Leslie has a private applicator license and sprays all the acres of corn and vegetables he and his father plants. He sprayed crops commercially until last year. They still handle fertilizer for a few local farmers.

One of the local taste treats of the season is provided by the Millers sweet corn. Sixty acres are planted along with eight acres of other garden favorites. The produce is sold in their own roadside stand and local businesses.

Maryland Agriculture Employee Receives Poultry Award

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Dr. Archibald Park, assistant secretary for Animal Health and Consumer Affairs of the Maryland Department of Agriculture, received the Delmarva Poultry Industry's Medal of Achievement Award at the Delmarva Banquet held April 16.

This award is given annually to a public servant of an agency or to a member of an organization for outstanding achievement and service on behalf of Delmarva's poultry industry.

"We are proud of Dr. Park for winning this prestigious award. He is the first one of our employees to receive an award from the Delmarva Poultry Industry," said Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley Jr.

Dr. Park was cited for drafting a memorandum of understanding between Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia to combat infectious and contagious disease in poultry flocks in any of the four states.

"Dr. Park is a dedicated public servant who works tirelessly to protect the health and safety of our animals and for being recognized for his outstanding efforts," Cawley said.

With a degree in veterinary medicine, Dr. Park has worked for the United States Department of Agriculture's Animal Disease Eradication Division.

Since joining the Maryland Department in 1984, Dr. Park has been active as a member of the Poultry Health Committee of the Delmarva Poultry Industry Inc.

All American Board Elects New Members

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — John Morris of Frederick, Md. and Dwight Hunter of West Alexander, were elected to the board of directors for the All American Dairy Show.

The elections were held during the November meeting of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Allied Industries Association. The association appoints directors to the All American board.

Their official duties began at the board meeting held in March. The board is composed of representatives of each of the six major dairy breeds and three Dairy Allied Industry representatives.

Morris, a nationally acclaimed dairy cattle judge of all dairy breeds, was Maryland extension dairyman for 30 years and has close ties to the All-American, having judged breed shows here for many years. He will serve on the board as a dairy industry representative, replacing Carl Brown of F.M. Brown's Sons Inc.

The Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association nominated Hunter to represent their breed on the All-American Board.

Hunter is a second generation Ayrshire breeder and partner in Toll Gate Farm of West Alexander. He has been active in the State and National Ayrshire Associations, an active community leader and a strong supporter of agricultural youth educational activities. Toll Gate is a regular Ayrshire exhibitor at the All-American.

Bull Classes Added

In other action, the board followed a request of the National Holstein Association and voted to add three young bull classes to the Holstein show.

The Bull Calf, Junior Yearling Bull and Senior Yearling Bull classes will be added.

The board also endorsed the continuation of several youth activities.

Jr. Dairyman Contest Set

The Junior Dairyman Contest, scheduled for Sept. 24, is open to high school students from Pennsylvania and surrounding states. Now in its fifth year, this contest is sponsored by Pfizer Agriculture Division and Arm and Hammer Ag Products.

Carl Brown is chairman and Walter Wurster is contest superintendent. The program is designed to allow young dairyman to become more aware of herd management practices necessary in today's competitive industry.

Contestants will be judged on their knowledge in ten different areas: sire selection; descriptive type; identification of dairy, beef and veal cuts; identification of dairy feed ingredients; identification and evaluation of forages; identification of reproductive management tools; identification of dairy products; current issues in the dairy industry; herd health; and farm business management.

The Dairy Cattle Judging Forum for 4-H and FFA members, sponsored by Farm Credit, will also be held on Tuesday, Sept. 24. Seven classes of dairy cattle will be judged on body conformation.

The Invitational Youth Dairy Cattle Judging Contest is a competition for intercollegiate, FFA, and 4-H teams representing their states. Thirty-nine teams participated last year for top rankings in the five breed contests and for overall team and individual contest rankings. This year's contest will be held Sept. 23.

Once again this year, elementary school children from the Harrisburg area will be given tours of the show, a wonderful opportunity to view the cows and pet baby calves. At the conclusion of their visit, the children are treated to a fresh glass of milk served by several county dairy princesses. Over nine hundred children participated in this free event last year.

These activities of the Pennsylvania All-American are made possible by the financial support of show supporters, class sponsors and funds appropriated through the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Soviet Veterinarians Visit Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley Jr. recently announced that Maryland is the first state in the nation to officially host veterinary students from the Soviet Union in a formal exchange program. The students arrived in the United States on April 13.

"This exchange is a direct result of the agreements Gov. William Donald Schaefer signed during his trade mission to the Soviet Union last spring. Because of his efforts, we in Maryland are the proud hosts of six students from the Moscow Veterinary Academy, the premier veterinary school in the Soviet Union," Cawley said.

hosted by the Maryland Department of Agriculture, the University of Maryland System and veterinarians throughout Maryland.

During their first month, the Maryland Department of Agriculture will have the students visit private vet practices as well as the state animal health laboratories in Oakland, Frederick, Salisbury and College Park. They will also visit a poultry processing plant, a swine farm and a fish farm.

Their second month will be spent with the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine with headquarters in College Park (Md.) and Blacksburg (Va.).

They will have an opportunity to visit an equine hospital and government facilities at the National Institute of Health and the U.S. Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Maryland.

"They will be busy. And in their spare time we plan to take them on tours of Annapolis, Washington, D.C. and Baltimore. We want them to be able to take home many good memories," Cawley said.

While in Moscow on April 18, agriculture exec. Cawley signed with the Timiryazev Agricultural Academy, the USSR Agricultural Academy, the Institute of Agricultural Engineers and the Moscow Veterinary Academy. Taken together, these agreements put Maryland in the forefront in the field of agricultural cooperation with the Soviet Union.

Wetlands Preservation Legislation

The second part amends the state's "Clean and Green" tax-break law so that landowners can get tax breaks for protecting wetlands and forest areas.

The final part seeks to authorize a $25 million bond to fund the purchase of natural areas, including wetlands.

Several agricultural, or rural-interest organizations, have expressed concern with wetlands protections.

According to Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director with the Pennsylvania State Grange, the Brightbill proposal requires more study, but if it would address the issues of primacy, compensation, and the right to continue to farm on areas historically farmed, then it would tentatively receive Grange support.

The major concerns of most rural and agricultural organizations and individuals are that landowners be compensated for any lost monetary value placed on property due to protecting wetlands; fair compensation for wetlands condemed by the state for protection; clarify the definition of wetlands; establish primacy (one agency regulatory authority overall); increase the speed for DER review of permit applications; and establish a revolving 25-year grandfather clause so that any wetlands currently in agricultural use are exempt from regulatory actions which would stop the historic use of the land .

While it is too early to get a consensus of opinion from agricultural organizations on Brightbill's proposal, several spokespersons have said that it appears to address the issues.

However, there are many different interests concerned with wetlands protection. More than 220 groups and individuals commented on possible protection legislation to the state Environmental Resources and Energy Committee last year.

"This wetlands protection package was developed with the help of hundreds of interested people on all sides of the wetlands issue," Brightbill said.

The major differences between Brightbill's proposal and DER's proposed regulations are many.

In addition to mandating a comprehensive mapping of wetlands, state funding in addition to permit fees, establishing compensation and the right of the landowner to take DER to court if unjust taking of property has occured, the Brightbill proposal:

- Requires DER to be more service-oriented. Specifically it would direct DER to help property owners determine whether or not they have wetlands (within the federal definition now used by the Army Corps of Engineers).
- Encourages DER to delegate its functions to county conservation districts and local government to achieve better local working relationships between landowner and regulatory authority.
- Requires property owners to notify potential buyers that wetlands exist on the property.
- Authorizes DER to set criteria for permit reviews for activities in margin areas around wetlands.
- Requires wetlands replacements at a minimum 1½ acres of new wetland for every acre lost. And it calls for a 2-year monitoring of the replacement wetlands.
- Requires local governments to use the same definitions of wetlands in adopting local ordinances. And governments must regulate wetlands as part of their land development program.
- Requires DER to study the possibility of establishing state authority over wetlands, instead of the existing federal authority. DER would have to report to the General Assembly within 6 months of the signing of the bill into law.
- Requires DER to make an annual report on its program to protect wetlands and comment on its effectiveness.

The proposal would also create a 21-member "Wetlands Preservation Advisory Committee" which would be comprised of 12 members appointed by the secretary of DER; three each by president pro tempore of the Senate, and the speaker of the House; and three elected from DER's Citizens Advisory Council.

During the Pennsylvania State Grange's Legislative Meeting, Brightbill told the group that his proposal did not seek to change the definition, but rather to adopt the federal definition and to find out what kinds and amounts of wetlands are really in existance.

Currently, estimates are that about 500,000 acres of wetlands exist in Pennsylvania, with an estimated yearly loss of 1,200 acres.

However, the mapping and classification of wetlands would establish whether or not the wetlands that exist are valuable and what amount of protection should be afforded them.

Three types of classification are proposed — exceptional resource value, intermediate resource value, and ordinary resource value.

Exceptional and intermediate resource value wetlands are to be mapped within 3 years, while ordinary value wetlands are to be mapped within 5 years.

The definition of exceptional value wetlands would be: "Wetlands serving as habitats for endangered species and wetlands hydrologically connected to them; wetlands within 1 mile of and connected to the headwaters of streams designated as exceptional value by DER, or wetlands within the corridor of scenic rivers.

Exceptional wetlands are also those necessary to maintain the quality or quantity of private of public water supplies, those in natural or wild areas on state or federal forest land, wetlands designated under the federal Emergency Wetlands Resources Act of 1986, and any manmade wetland created to replace or enhance functions of existing wetlands as a result of a permit decision.

The specific types of wetlands to be called "intermediate value" is not outlined.

The types of wetlands which would be considered "ordinary value," includes those constructed to treat acid mine drainage, sewage or other waste, wetlands formed in manmade stormwater managment, drainage, or in flood control facilities, or erosion and sedimentation control facilities, wetlands formed unitentionally as a result of manmade or animal-made changes in drainage (unless they contain an endangered species). Changes to wetlands created as a result of other DER permits would be regulated under those permits.

Permit applications are required to go through a public review and comment process including a notice in a local newspaper and publication in the "Pennsylvania Bulletin." DER must also publish its permit decision in the Bulletin.

DER must review permits within 45 days, with 15 working days to determine whether applications are complete, and 15 days to notify applicants if they are not complete. If a landowner does not provide information within 60 days, DER can deny the permit. However, if DER does not issue a decision within 45 days of reciept of a completed application, the application fee would have to be returned to the landowner.

Permit fees would start at $300 each for basic permits. Small pro-

High Prices Paid For Blue Halter Heifers, Calves

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Blue Halter Calf and Bred Heifer Sale held here during the annual state Guernsey Breeders' Association was one of the best, according to association president James Trotter.

'Prices have still held good for this sale, even though the milk price has been declining.'

Jim Trotter, president

The sale, held at the Chambersburg Rod & Gun Club, averaged $1,280 for all 32 bred heifers and calves.

The top selling animal was Walnut Lane Penders Deena, a 2-year-old bred heifer cosnigned by Rodney and Darlene Stuff of Mercersburg. It was purchased by Lisiter Farm, in Newton Square, for $3,500.

Lisiter Farm not only purchased the top seller, but the top three selling bred heifers. They paid $3,100 for 3-year-old Gerar Fayette Bonnie-ET, consigned by Royal Paulson Champion Syndicate of Winston Salem, N.C. and they paid $3,000 for Oakland Fayettes Hillary, consigned by Wilbur Moser of Chicora.

The sale of the 16 bred heifers averaged $1,596.

The highest selling calf was Walnut Lane Victory, born in September, consigned by Rodney and Darlene Stuff. It was bought by Troy Hill, of Sandy Lake.

The second highest selling calf was also born September and was consigned by Harold Pyle of Malvern. It was bought by Ray and Kay Lindsey of Hoopestown, Ill., for $1,800.

The 16 calves sold for an average of $964.

"It was one of the better sales," Trotter said. "Prices have still held good for this sale, even though the milk price has been declining. The outlook for good animals is still there."

"The outlook for good animals is still there."

Jim Trotter, president

Also during the association's meeting, Mellisa McDonald, of Imler, was crowned the new Guernsey Queen. She takes over the crown from Beth Ann Clark.

Production awards were presented to Axel Linde and Millie Widmann, brother and sister duo whose 57 cows made 16,554 pounds of milk, 747 of fat and 578 pounds of protein on the average during 1990.

The high cow production award went to John Morrow whose cow Hillside Lance Glenda produced 23,512 pounds of milk, 1,019 pounds of fat and 733 pounds of protein.

Millie and Axel also had the cows which had the highest fat and protein production in the association. Lindenhof King Peppermint produced 23,113 pounds of milk, 1,041 pounds of fat and 775 pounds of protein for the high butterfat award. Lindenhof Pr. Extra Tinsel-Excellent produced 22,933 pounds of milk, 1,112 pounds of fat and 833 pounds of protein.

Ron Eberhard, guest speaker, presented a slide show and talk on keeping the farm in the family.

An outspoken man who runs a consulting business in addition to giving talks, Eberhard told of his dissention with his father, and the disenchantment after working with his father for years with the promise that it would be passed on, only to find out that his father would sell the farm to the highest bidder.

Eberhard said that those who truly want to see a family farm continue should not set their children up against the highest bidder in competition for ownership.

And he said that if none of the children are interested in continuing to farm, perhaps there might be other children who are interested who could use the help.

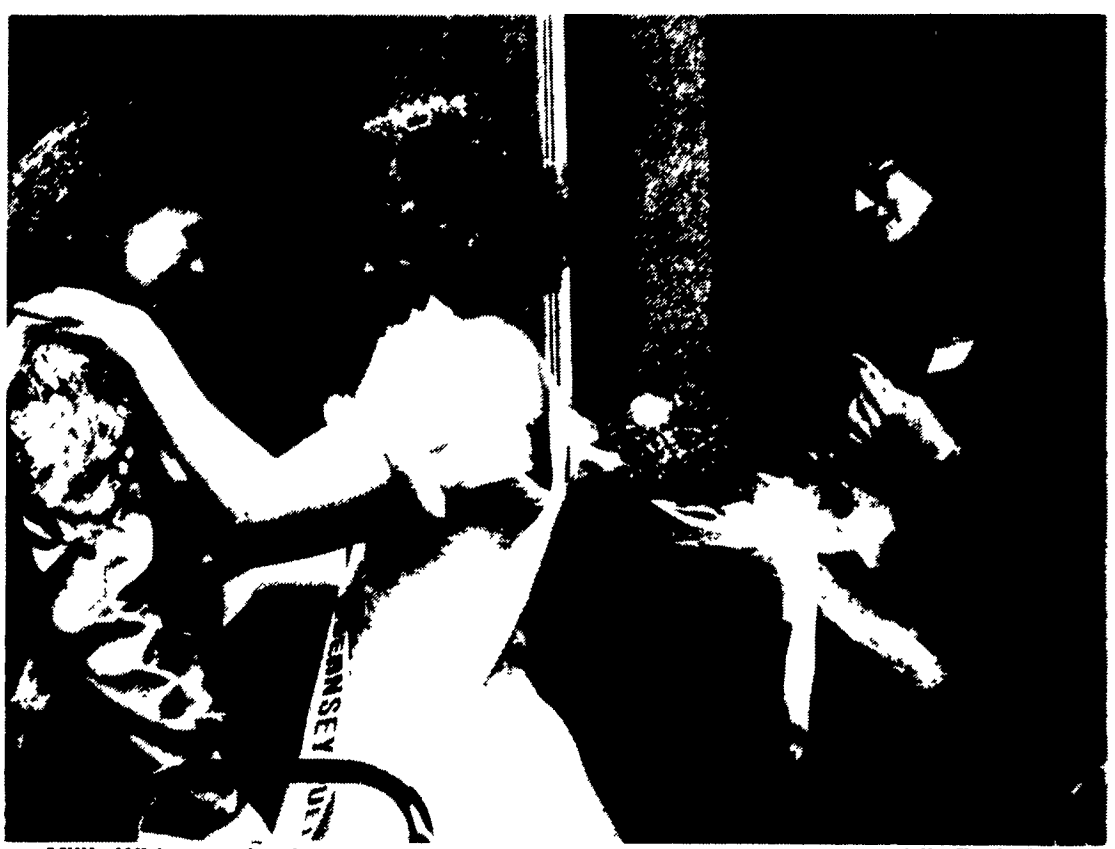
He also said that if no one could be found, they should sell the farm and enjoy life. But also, to enjoy family life and cherish it, because it doesn't last.

Next on the agenda for the Guernsey breeders is an ice cream social in Mercer in July; the national Guernsey convention from June 21-24; and the junior members are to operate a milk shake stand at Ag Progress Days in August.

Ron Eberhard speaks to the Guernsey Breeders about his poor relationship with his father and broken promises. He urged to keep the farm in the family and the family in farming.

Newly crown Guernsey Queen Mellisa McDonald addresses the several hundred members of the state Guernsey Breeders' Association.

Millie Widmann and brother Axel Linde show the awards the received for having the highest producing herd and the top cows for protein production and fat production.



Millie Widmann, in charge of the Guernsey Queen Contest, looks on while Beth Ann Clark relinquishes the title to Mellisa McDonald.

Check Your Conservation Plan Before Planting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers in federal farm programs should review their conservation plan before planting, said Tim Emenheiser, district conservationist, for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service (SCS).

Emenheiser said farmers should review their plans now because the 1985 Farm Bill requires farmers who receive USDA farm program benefits to install conservation practices contained in their conservation plan by December 31, 1994.

Most conservation compliance plans outline a specific crop rotation or tillage method designed to reduce soil erosion on highly erodible cropland. If the farmer does not follow the crop rotation called for in the plan, he or she might be out of compliance and lose certain USDA benefits for that year. These benefits include commodity payments, crop insurance, Farmers Home Administration loans, Conservation Reserve Program payments and disaster assistance payments.

Here are the procedures farmers should follow:

• Review the crop rotation and tillage sections of your plan and note starting dates. Make sure you are following the crop rotations detailed in your plan. If you are not, contact your local SCS office for a plan revision. You must get the revision prior to changing your rotation.

• If you face any difficulty in applying your plan, contact your local SCS office.

• Are tillage methods specified in the plan being carried out? When you follow the conservation tillage method, you must be sure to leave at least 30 percent crop residue on the soil surface after planting. If you are not sure what 30 percent residue looks like on a field, check with your local SCS office.

• Check the plan before you drain a wet area in your field. Your local SCS office can also help you in this matter.

Emenheiser said farmers may be wondering how the newly passed 1990 Farm Bill will affect them. The new law states that farmers must keep their conservation plan on schedule. Each year the SCS office will check five percent of these plans for compliance.

For more information, contact the SCS office, (717) 272-4618.

Sen. Specter Seeks Opinions

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter is seeking the views of Pennsylvanians on several agricultural issues now before Congress.

Specter's request for public opinion came during remarks to the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative Extension Associations at its annual meeting on April 2 at Toftrees Resort and Conference Center. The PCCEA is a statewide group of volunteers who provide advice and support for Penn State Cooperative Extension programs.

Specter, a member of the Senate Ag Appropriations Subcommittee, told the PCCEA he wants to hear public opinion on the recently defeated Leahy Amendment, which is designed to help dairy farmers cope with lower milk prices by restoring milk support prices to summer 1990 levels. Specter voted in favor of the amendment.

Specter also said he is gauging public support for a proposed $500,000 educational program to improve the efficiency of the state's dairy farms. The Pennsylvania Dairy Efficiency Program (PDEP) would be developed and delivered by Penn State's College of Agriculture in association with dairy cooperatives, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and private financial institutions.

Under PDEP, Penn State would develop an integrated technology, production and financial management package to be presented to Pennsylvania dairy producers through intensive workshops. The program would include ongoing educational support for PDEP participants and field studies to test and translate research findings for dairy industry use.

A third dairy issue on which Specter seeks input is the recent award of milk safety research funds to Penn State. The senator supported a special USDA grant of more than $268,000 to study the microorganism listeria and other bacteria found in milk and their economic and social effects on consumption.

Specter said he also wants the public's stance on funding for the USDA's National Research Initiative (NRI) competitive grants program, currently funded at $73 million. President Bush has proposed an increase to $123 million in the coming fiscal year, but the land-grant university system is requesting $200 million for the program.

Specter said input on these issues from the public and the agricultural community is essential as the Senate Appropriations Committee prepares to allocate $1.3 trillion dollars in federal funding. He urged PCCEA members and others to contact his Washington office with their opinions on issues important to agriculture.

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Possible Impacts To Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — According to David Hess, executive director of the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee, which is chaired by Sen. David Brightbill, the proposed Wetlands Mapping and Protection Act would probably not affect historic farming activity as such.

According to Hess, those wetlands which would be considered ordinary value would not require a permit in order to conduct some activity upon them. However, draining the area is not using, but modifying.

Ordinary wetlands include those formed in stormwater and erosion control facilities; those formed in an existing manmade field drainage systems, including ponds used for agricultural purposes; those formed unintentionally as a result of manmade changes in drainage patterns or wetlands formed as a result of animal activity (beaver ponds).

Under the proposed law, the activities which would be granted permit waivers would include normal farming activities in areas that have been in agricultural use in any of the last 25 years, including plowing, seeding, harvesting crops, maintenance or reuse of lands held in reserve, maintenance of farm or stock ponds, irrigation, minor drainage, agricultural waste facilities or drainage ditches, tile drainage systems or farm roads. Also existing fords across wetlands on a farm would be granted a permit waiver.

DER may define Best Management Practices (BMPs) for conducting these activities, including requiring that the BMPs become part of a conservation plan and take corrective action if a pollution problem results.

Activities requiring a general permit include building access roads or driveways affecting 1 acres or less; other agricultural pratices including changes in grassed waterways, agricultural waste facilities, ponds used for irrigation, livestock, watering or fire protection, if part of a conservation plan.

DER may define BMPs for these activities including requiring that the BMPs become part of a conservation plan and take corrective action if a pollution problem results.

Any other farm activity on a wetlands would be required to get a full permit.

jects would carry a permit fee of $75 and a $50 permit fee would be charged for certain special permits. Also DER would be authorized to adjust the review fees. A registration fee of $50 is also proposed for individual uses of general permits.

Permits would not be issued in exceptional resource wetlands unless the activity would not adversely affect the wetland, there would be no practical alternative, the activity would no permanently add to water pollution and the applicant would replace the wetlands on a 1-acre-lost to 1½ -acre-created ratio.

The Owner-Sampler Programs

BOB ORMSBY
Pa. DHIA Training Coordinator

In this column, I have discussed the merits of the A/P program, the PRIME program and the DHI-APCS program. Let me bring you up to date on the "Owner-Sampler" testing program. There are nine options available under the title "owner-sampler" and referred to at the Service Center as the "forty series" (see Figure 1).

Unlike the traditional DHI program, where the supervisor stays on the farm and collects all samples and data, the onwer-sampler client is furnished with whatever equipment is necessary and he/she records data and collects his/her own samples, and the savings in labor costs are passed along to the member. The supervisor returns to collect the samples and equipment and at that time is responsible for assuring that all necessary information has been gathered and recorded.

For complete processing and accurate production records, it is necessary to report fresh dates, dry dates, purchased and removed dates. Sick cows, breeding records and feeding data are optional and can also be entered on test day.

The computer generated reports produced from this data are identical to those produced for other, more "official" type programs. The records are considered "unofficial" by USDA, NAAB and the breed associations, but every bit as valuable to the member for management purposes.

The owner-sampler has the privilege of making on the spot adjustments to milk weights for sick cows, odd milking hours and for the rare occassion of a meter malfunction. He or she can also set up the "test day" in advance and is spared the need to comply with the policies and procedures governing "official" programs.

The traditional owner sampler program is code 40. All milkings in a 24-hour period are weighed and sampled once a month. In the AM?PM version of this (code 41) one milking is factored by the DHI computer and a complete sample is taken at the weighed milking. For code 42 (DHI-OS-APCS) all milkings are recorded but only one sampled on test day each month. The two "milk only" programs (43-44) are just what it says. Milk weights are recorded, but no samples taken.

The last four are the lesser known options available under the owner-sampler program. Test plans 45-46 (DHI-OS-AC/DHI-OS-AP-AC) allow a member to record individual milk weights on each cow and choose a uniform component test to be used for the whole herd, either the component test from the milk plant or the average for his respective breed.

A more realistic picture of the herd's performance can be attained by choosing code 47 (DHI-OS-TC). Instead of breed or plant averages, the component samples are collected and tested every three months and the milk weights recorded monthly. For strictly "pounds of milk produced" code 48 allows for milk only records on each cow with only four actual "test days" a year. Because these records are owner-sampler management records, the interval between "test days" can be determined by member needs, placing at least a minimal type program withing reach of any milk producer.

DHIA has changed to meet the needs of its members, and the availability of programs such as these needs to be made known. I can't do justice to an explanation of our services here on this page, but your local professional DHIA representative is prepared to discuss these options with you. Our number is 1-800-DHI-TEST (344-8378).

How Does Your Herd Compare?

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — This data is pulled from Pennsylvania DHIA's mainframe computer each week. It is a one-week summary representing approximately one-fourth of the herds on test, as they are tested monthly.

These data are valuable from a business management standpoint and can be used for comparing your operations to the averages from almost 1,400 herds across the state.

"My dairy farm is located on rolling terrain in Reedsburg, Wisconsin. After the first cutting, I used the Aer-Way on my thinning alfalfa stand to get the fertilizer and water into the ground. The second cutting was noticeably better with thicker and leafier alfalfa. I would recommend the Aer-Way to other dairy farmers."

Grange Meets With Legislators

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

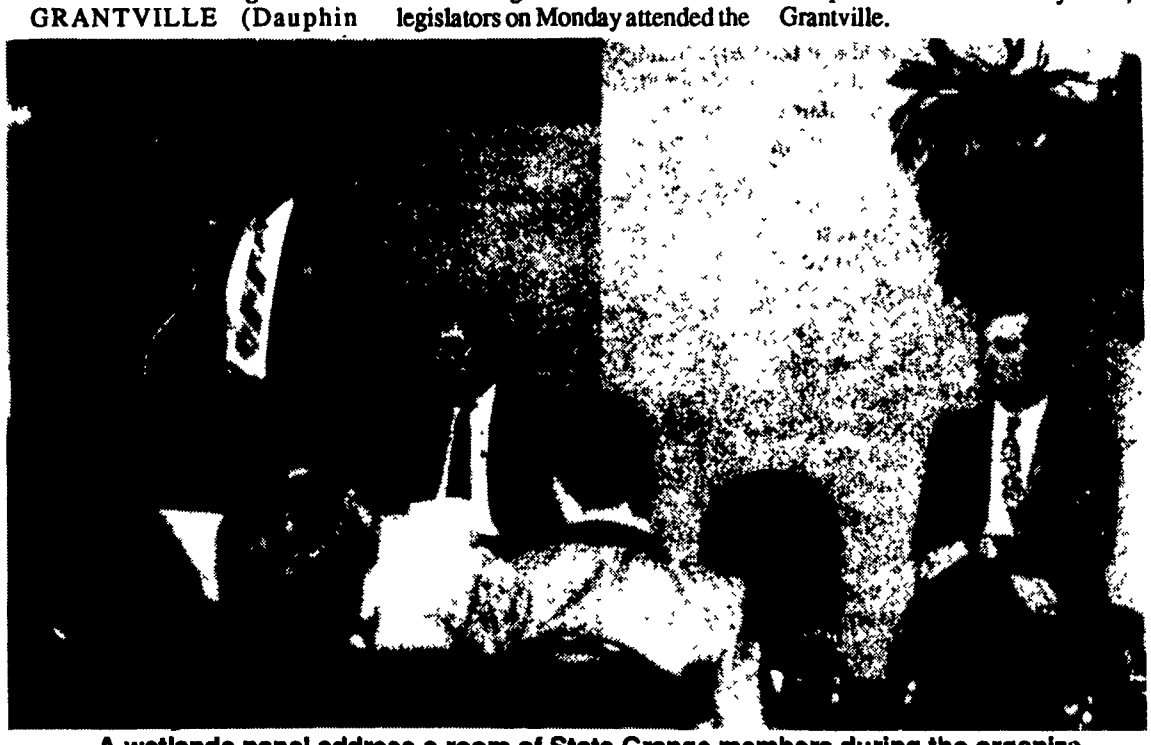
GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — About 400 Pennsylvania State Grange members and state legislators on Monday attended the annual Grange Week Legislative Banquet at the Holiday Inn, Grantville.



A wetlands panel address a room of State Grange members during the organization's legislative day activities. Barry Isaacs, with the Soil Conservation Service discusses federal laws and activities, while from the left, Sen. David Brightbill and DER representative Roger Fickes await questions from the crowd. Brightbill recently introduced comprehensive wetlands mapping and protection legislation.

Grange Week is nationally celebrated every year by the more than 325,000 members of the almost 125-year-old organization for rural people. The Pennsylvania Grange annually holds its legislative banquet during the week and holds seminar's during the day on a variety of issues.

On Monday, four legislative issues were discussed during seminars: a panel on wetlands; a panel on dairy issues; a speaker on integrated pest management (IPM); and a speaker on nutrient management.

Other workshops/seminars were held, but were related to non-legislative topics.

In a news release, Brenda Shambaugh, Grange legislative director said, "The Grange is concerned about a number of issues currently on the floor of the General Assembly. Wetland, nutrient managment, protection of roadside markets, widow tax, octane testing levels, and the bottle bill are a few of these issues."

Although each seminar was well attended, the wetlands issue has had the most recent attention because of a legislative package proposal from Sen. David "Chip" Brightbill, R-Lebanon, chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

The proposal by Brightbill would adopt the federal definition of a wetland, and would concentrate on regulating wetlands use, rather than creating a new definition.

U.S. Ag Secretary Accelerates Dairy Study

WASHINGTON, April 10-- Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan today announced the acceleration of the dairy policy study process mandated by the 1990 farm bill.

"The economic distress of dairy producers is pressing," said Madigan. "By advancing the timetable for completion of the policy study, we will be able to work that much sooner with Congress on the best strategies to assist the dairy community."

The farm bill originally called for a study on dairy policy to be completed by August 1. June 15 is the new date by which the study on dairy policy will be completed.

Madigan said the new deadline would require "a greater effort by USDA through every aspect of the policy study process."

He added, "This is not an internal study procedure. It is a public process which will seek comments from industry and the public."

The accelerated timetable requires the study and notice to be published in the Federal Register by May 15, which will be followed by a 15-day public comment period. During June there will be a review of public comments with the final study and recommendations submitted to Congress by June 15.

Pa Ayrshire Breeders Capture National Recognition

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders won a number of national awards during the the National Ayrshire Breeders Association annual convention held in Burlington, Vt., earlier this month.

Foremost among the awards was the distinguished service award which national president Ralph Shenk presented to Earl E. Keefer and his wife Annabel, of Sycamore-Meade Farm, in Millersburg. The award is presented to those who are judged to have performed in such a manner as to advance and improve the Ayrshire breed.

Earl Keefer is a past president of the national association, a position he held for two terms.

He first became interested in Ayrshires after his family herd was destroyed because they failed a health test. The replacement herd contained a few Ayrshires and some smaller cattle. Because of his like for the breed, he decided to follow up with them in creating his own herd.

His first Ayrshire investment was amde in 1948. He also participated in 4-H activities, visited other farms, exhibited at nearby shows, consigned animals and selected for a high-caliber herd. By this time his entire family became involved.

His first Ayrshire Breeders meeting he attended was a local club gathering in 1950. He was soon elected president of the local club. At the same time he was also heavily involved in other agricultural organizations on a state-wide basis and he worked for all breeds.

In time, Keefer became president of the state Ayrshire Association, director of the National Ayrshire Assocaition, vice president and president twice. The record of his administration was constructive and profitable.

In more recent times, he served as a member of the committee which planned the 1988 World Ayrshire Conference in the United States and he continued as courier on one of the six buses used.

According to an introduction of Keefer made during the national convention, "This man never seemed to be in a hurry. Regardless of his responsibilities, he seemed to have time to be fair and courteous to everyone. His answers were not quickly spoken, but were definite and understandable, as well as confidence building.

"Back when many herds continued to still have horns, he acknowledged being somewhat puzzled as to why the breed association moved slowly in getting the horns off and in not paying more attention to improving production along with the continuing interest in show type. However, this did not become a distrubing influence to him. He simply went ahead, doing what he thought was necessary to develop a really good herd."

Keefer has been a strong supporter of consignment sales, having consigned to 11 national sales. His herd reached 150 head, with a herd average of 14,200 pounds of milk and 592 pounds of fat and income of feed costs at $1,119.

He also twice offered his farm to be used as the site of the state picnic.

In other business, Pennsylvania breeders also won national awards for production.

Androssan Farms of Villanova won their 31st constructive breeder award for production by 96 Ayrshires of 20,637 pounds of milk with a 4 percent fat test.

Charles and Donald Gable, of Elverson, won their 33rd constructive breeder award for production by 50 Ayrshires of 17,159 pounds of milk at 4 percent.

Penn State University won a 29th constructive breeder award for production by 16 Ayrshires of 17,219 pounds of 4 percent milk.

Also, Pennsylvania breeders compiled some national leading herd averages for production of 4 percent milk:

In the 75 to 99 head catagory, Androssan Farms lead the nation with 96 head producing 20,900 pounds. In the same catagory, Masonic Homes, Elizabethtown, had 91 head which produced 14,797 pounds.

The Gable's herd was recognized for its produciton in the 50 to 75 head catagory.

Penn State was recognized for its herd's production among herds of 15 to 24 head. Also in the same herd size catagory, John Rodgers, of Belleville, received national recognition for the 16,521 pounds of milk his 20 cows averaged.

Arvid Kobosky, of Fayette City, also was recognized nationally for outstanding production among milking herds of five to 14 head. Kobosky's six head milking herd averaged 18,952 pounds of 4 percent milk.

During the business meeting, Ralph Shank Sr., Palmyra Farm, Hagerstown, Md., was re-elected president, while Charles Gable of Elverson, was re-elected director to Region No. 1.

The national sale, a bred heifer consigned from the Gables' herd sold for $3,200, second highest of the sale.

Another Pennsylvania Ayrshire also was among the top 10 selling animals at the sale. A 4-year-old cow consigned by Robert and Bonnie Wentworth of Quarryville, sold for $2,000, and was ninth highest.

New York Dairymen Plead For State Help

BATAVIA, N.Y. — Dairy farmers from across New York State traveled to Albany last week to tell state officials they need economic help or their industry may be destroyed.

Farmers testified during a milk price hearing that began Tuesday, April 16, that their future on the farm is jeopardized because milk prices have plummeted 30 percent in the last four months to 1978 levels. Most farmers now receive less for their milk than it costs to produce it.

Cornell University economists have predicted that 1,000 New York farms, or about 10 percent of the state's total, will go out of business this year unless something is done. The vice president of Farm Credit Bank of Springfield, Mass., predicted that the weakened economic situation on dairy farms will lead to more farms going out of business in 1992 and 1993.

And the impact of the milk-price plunge is being felt in other segments of the New York economy. Veterinarians, feed dealers and farm equipment dealers testified that they have been forced to lay off staff because of declines in their business. A banker said many of his customers will be forced to borrow against their net worth to cover operating expenses, debt payments or living expenses.

The testimony is being gathered by the state Department of Agriculture and Markets in response to a petition from the Regional Cooperative Bargaining Agency (RCBA). RCBA asked Richard T. McGuire, the commissioner of agriculture, to use his powers under the Rogers-Allen Act to establish minimum milk prices state wide. The prices requested by RCBA would provide farmers with approximately $1 per hundred pounds of milk more than the current market price.

"If the price of milk doesn't increase a lot, and quickly, we will lose our farm, our home," said Greta Mullan. She and her husband, James, operate an 85-cow dairy farm in Little Falls, Herkimer County. She said the farm is losing $207 per day because of the depressed milk prices.

"I am now living off my equity," said Robert Dumas, a dairy farmer from Mooers, Clinton County. "In the first quarter of 1991, I have lost $10,000 or 30 percent of my income since last year. I am faced with the decision of refinancing the farm or having to sell, if I can."

"During the first three months of 1991, our income is down $19,150 from last year, yet our costs for energy, labor, machinery parts and taxes have all continued to rise," said William Olin of Ninevah, Broome County.

Rising costs while milk prices decline was a concern that was echoed repeatedly by dairy farmers during the four days of testimony. In a detailed economic analysis of her family's two-farm operation in Le Roy, Genesee County, Rochelle Stein noted the following price increases:

* Workmen's compensation, 21.4 percent, or $3,000 per year.
* Liability and property insurance premiums up $3,000 per year.
* Electricity, 5-cent kwh increase, or $11,740 per year.
* Town taxes, up 8 percent, or $615.
* Health insurance, up $514.
* New federal Commodity Credit Corp. assessment, $8,836 per year.

These increases, coupled with milk prices at 1978 levels, make it harder for farmers to stay in business, farmers repeatedly said. "I haven't heard of a single thing I buy that has gone down in price, let alone to 1978 levels," observed Ed Petkowsek of Little Falls.

The farmers' concerns were echoed by Cornell University economists and others associated with the dairy industry. James Putnam II, vice president of Farm Credit Bank of Springfield, which serves New York State dairymen, estimated 70 percent of all New York dairy farmers will have a major cash flow deficit in 1991.

"Financial losses and the cash flow squeeze on individual farms will ultimately have an impact on the New York dairy industry as a whole," he said. "It may not be apparent until 1992 or 1993. At some point, farms and cows will be taken out of production. The longer the present situation persists, the greater the ultimate effect on New York's milk production capability."

New York is the nation's third-largest milk producing state and dairy farmers are a billion-dollar industry. Putnam predicted that the current low milk prices will produce a $310 million decline in dairy farmer income statewide.

"And, the impact will be felt throughout the rural economy of upstate New York by all of those businesses and individuals who are economically interdependent with the dairy farmer," he said. "Clearly, we are looking at a situation of major economic impact to many areas of upstate New York in 1991 and beyond."

Some agri-businessmen testified they are already feeling the impact of the dairy farmers' losses. Allen Houghton, who operates Houghton Farm Supply, a custom feed manufacturer who employs 21 persons in Pierrepont Manor, Jefferson County, said, "Never in my 13-year association with the feed business have I seen the money supply shrink so rapidly." The company normally does $4 million in sales annually. Its accounts receivables have jumped more than $120,000 in the last four months and more than one-fifth of its customers have outstanding bills of more than 60 days.

Robert Frazee is a part owner of Cazenovia Equipment Company, a farm implement dealer with outlets in Madison, Cortland and Oneida counties. He compared sales figures for the first three months of 1991 with the same period for 1990 and discovered total sales are down 22 percent, while accounts receivable are up 115 percent.

"If some action is not taken immediately, not only is the future of hundreds of perhaps thousands of dairy farms in New York State in jeopardy, but the future of hundreds of agri-businesses such as ours are also in jeopardy," he said.

Veterinarians are also noticing the problems in the dairy industry. Dr. Charles H. Allen is one of four veterinarian partners who operate Countryside Veterinary Clinic in Lowville, Lewis County, which employs six additional vets and 15 support staff. Serving 537 dairy herds provides 71 percent of the practice's gross income. They recently laid off one employee, reduced hours for most hourly employees, froze wages and are reducing or eliminating retirement benefits because of reduced business caused by lower milk prices.

"I am concerned that prolonged low milk prices will slow progress toward higher quality milk for the consuming public as dairy farmers look at any and all ways to cut costs," Dr. Allen said. "These will include programs and management tools to prevent mastitis. Mastitis, an udder infection, results in lower quality milk, and could lead to reduced consumer demand."

Dr. Paul Schneible, a veterinarian with the Perry Veterinary Clinic in Wyoming County, echoed Dr. Allen's concerns. "Too many farmers are stopping testing (through the Dairy Herd Improvement Cooperative) to reduce expenses," he said. "Certain to follow will be less concern over low somatic cell count and higher quality milk. This must be avoided."

He also warned that if farmers are forced out of business by low milk prices, the property tax burden will shift dramatically to the remaining taxpayers.

RCBA's petition received endorsement from two state officials this week. Sen. John M. McHugh of Watertown, Jefferson County, chairman of the Legislative Commission on Dairy Industry Development, said, "At the retail level, dairy is a $5 billion a year business in New York State. As such, it is the backbone of many rural New York communities. Unless some type of action is taken to alleviate the severe financial distress on many dairy farms, the rural economy in New York State will face a possible $300 million loss of income in 1991 alone."

The commission Sen. McHugh chairs voted unanimously to support RCBA's petition, he reported.

Assemblyman Paul D. Tonko of Amsterdam said, "I believe that under the terms of the Rogers-Allen Act, the disruptive and demoralizing conditions in the milk market in New York warrant your swift approval of the emergency petition filed by RCBA on behalf of all the dairy farmers throughout the state."

The speakers urged Commissioner McGuire to quickly use his powers to establish minimum milk prices to provide some economic relief for dairy farmers. Several farmers said the prices asked for by the RCBA petition weren't high enough, but provide a step in establishing an "economic survival floor" for the state's dairy industry.

The future of more than just New York's dairy farmers depends upon the hearing's results, said an official of Vermont's Department of Agriculture. Donald F. George, director of animal and dairy industries for Vermont, testified that his state recently created a Milk Commission that could establish minimum prices. However, because milk markets are intertwined, "we have to be in the same ballpark as New York," he said. "The marketplace needs both states.

"Vermont may take no action until New York does. That's the general feeling," he said.

The hearing at the Polish Community Center, 225 Washington Avenue Extension, Albany, is open to the public and is expected to last at least until April 30. After testimony is complete, the commissioner will review it and decide whether or not to establish minimum prices and what those prices should be.

Stairs Rails Against Casey Budget Proposals

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Stating that Gov. Robert P. Casey proposes "milking Pennsylvania farmers until they're bone dry," Rep. Jess Stairs and the Republican members of the House Agriculture Committee have pledged to fight the governor's proposals to drastically increase more than 24 individual fees paid by the farm community to do business in Pennsylvania.

Stairs, minority chairman of the committee, said that not only has Casey proposed, for the fifth year, major budget cuts for vital agricultural programs, "he wants to charge farmers and agribusinesses hundreds of thousands of dollars in huge fee increases to pay for minimum state agricultural programs.

"Gov. Casey's proposed budget for fiscal year 1991-92 makes it quite clear how much he supports agriculture, Pennsylvania's largest industry: very little.

"In fact, his attitude toward the state's farming community could be described as non-existent, even contemptuous," Stairs said.

Under the governor's budget, Pennsylvania farmers would be charged fees which double or triple and some which increase by more than 100 percent.

For example, veterinarian diagnostic laboratory testing fees are slated to double from $1 to $20 per test to $2 to $40 per test.

The Agriculture Department laboratory located outside Harrisburg administers tests for the diagnosis of diseases in livestock and poultry.

"Livestock grading fees would increase from 10 to 25 cents per head to $15 per hour," Stairs said.

"Livestock grading is conducted by agents from the Livestock Division of the Bureau of Market Development assigned to major sales auctions and livestock brokers. They are responsible for grading livestock according to USDA standards. Presently, the fees vary according to the grade of livestock.

"Under Casey's plan, the fee would be standardized at a huge jump in price from present fees," Stairs said.

Stairs said that currently no fee is charged for the Market News Service, a newsletter providing producers with market news and sales prices.

"However, Casey wants to charge a $60 subscription fee for the service, a price which represents too extreme an increase.

"He also wants to double the fruit tree improvement program fee, from 1 percent of sales to 2 percent of sales, to provide disease-free stock to nurseries and growers," Stairs said.

Representing Fayette and Westmoreland counties, Stairs said the governor proposes doubling the fee to obtain a seed certification tag, proving purity, content, germination and viability of seed batches.

"Another huge fee increase suggested by Casey is a $125 charge which dairies would be required to pay for a testing license to maintain their own labs. Dairies also would be charged $35 to purchase a milk sanitation permit," Stairs explained.

The governor proposes charging $35 for food establishment licenses for each of the following businesses: candy manufacturers, cider processors, flour mills, food canneries, food stores, salvage food dealers, dry storage warehouses and miscellaneous food processors.

Stairs said that all but three of the proposed fee increases may be enacted by department regulation or executive order.

The three fee changes needing legislative approval are the food establishment license, the milk/dairy products testing license and the milk sanitation permit.

This makes the fifth year the Legislature is forced to come to the rescue by reinstating funding for current programs.

"But now our task will be even more difficult since this governor seems determined not only to cut funding for, but also to totally destroy the Commonwealth's most lucrative industry.

"My colleagues and I, who sit on the agriculture committee, are bewildered by the misguided and confusing logic Gov. Casey seems intent on following. "We only hope that the logic of stronger, more determined minds in the General Assembly will prevail.

"But be assured that we will do all we can to stop this massive devastation of Pennsylvania agriculture," Stairs said.

Machinery Causes Soil Compaction, Reduces Yields

WASHINGTON — Corn yields fall off as much as ana average of 16 bushels an acre where wheeles farm machinery packs down the soil, according to a 3-year federal study of an Iowa farm.

Donald Erbach, an agricultural engineer at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Soil Tilth Laboratory in Ames, Iowa, said the study tested three fleets of farm machinery, each exerting a different ground pressure.

The laboratory is operated by USDA's Agrucltural Research Service.

In the study, one fleet had tires, another rubber tracks and third was equipped with what are called low ground pressure tracks. The low ground pressure tracks are experimental and have a longer and wider track that more evenly distributes pressure on the soil, Erbach said.

"On test plots were low ground pressure tracks were used, yields averaged 102 bushels an acre. That's 19 percent greater that average yields of 86 bushels an acre from tire-compacted soil," Erbach said.

According to Erbach, for each pass through the corn field, tractors with tires exerted 18 pounds of ground pressure per square inch of soil; rubber tracks exerted 6 pounds; and low ground pressure tracks exerted 2.5 pounds of pressure.

"Corn farmers have suffered lowered yields from compaction over the years, but this study indicates ground pressure can be changed to increase yields," Erbach said.

Yields fro 1988, 1989 and 1990, for the three fleets were: tires, 62.5, 83.7 and 11.1 bushels per acre; rubber tracks, 73.4, 92.8 and 128.5 bushels per acre; and low ground pressure tracks, 68.6, 99.4 and 138.7 bushels per acre.

Erbach said the research was aimed at monitoring fields that were much larger than typical test plots and checking corn yields and compaction over a 3-year cycle. all field studies were done on the Pieper farm near Wever in Lee County.

Erbach worked on the study with agricultural engineer Stewart Melvin and agronomist Richard Cruse at Iowa State University and engineer David Janzen of Caterpillar Inc., Peoria, Ill.

Erbach said the "study is part of ongoing research to better understand how soil is stressed by farm machinery while performing necessary tasks, like tillage."

A sprayer mounted on low ground pressure tracks applied liquid herbicide and nitrogen to all fields. The the test fleets were used to perform all field operations. Included were preparing seedbed, planting, moldboard plowing and harvesting on Chequest silty loam.

That loam is comprised of 38 percent sand, 34 percent silt and 28 percent clay. Such soil drains poorly.

ADADC Presents Leo Briggs Award

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The Leo Briggs Memorial Award was presented to Marty and Bonnie Baker of Tioga County, during the 31st Annual Meeting of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. (ADADC) on Feb. 19 in Liverpool, N.Y.

The award recognizes those with a strong commitment to milk promotion.

Marty Baker, his father and two brothers, operate the "Baker Family Farm." They milk 220 cows and have 1,180 tillable acres. The Bakers ship their milk to Progressive Dairyman's Cooperative.

As part of their award, the Bakers traveled to Salt Lake City to attend the annual meeting of United Dairy Industry Association last fall. They reported on their trip during the meeting.

Along with his brothers, Marty was a volunteer with the Tioga County Dairy Day Committee. According to Marty, "A successful future for the Baker Family Farm will only be possible by the continuation of a strong milk marketing program."

Bonnie and her sister-in-law Sherrie are coordinators of the Tioga County Dairy Princess Committee.

The award was initiated in 1983, following the death of one of dairy promotion's key leaders, Leo Briggs. The fund was started with the goal of training a new generation of dairy promoters. A farm couple is selected each year.

Select Sires Celebrates 25th Year

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — Select Sires Inc., an artificial insemination organzation for dairy and beef cattle, marked its 25th anniversary in October last year, but just recently announced that its sales for 1990 exceeded its target goal for 1992, with a total of more than five million units of semen sold.

Richard Chichester, general manager, released the information recently during a speech he made at the ogranization's 25th annual meeting, held at its headquarters in Plain City, Ohio.

"To proclaim 1990 as the best 12 months of our 25-year history is not annual meeting rhetoric at all, but solidy supported by the facts," Chichester said.

Delegates and directors from the 12 member-cooperatives and former members managers and directors were among the 130 guests in attendance.

In other business, Bernard Heisner, former Select Sires employee, presented a 180-page history book on the organization, "25 Years of Growth to Leadership," that he was commissioned to write.

A detailed index summarizes the high points of the 25 years of events. Five chapters, representing five-year increments in the organization's development, detail the expainsion and growth. More than 100 photographs of employees and events are also included.

Heisner autographed and presented the first copy to Clarence Boyke, president of Select Sires. Boyke, a Holstein breeders from Wisconsin, along with Brainard Palmer-Ball, pushed for the book to be written..

Chichester also presented a bronzed plaque honoring the eight founding directors of Select Sires. Those founding directors present from the originial four-member cooperatives were Keith King, Illinois, Norman Henke, Illinios, Daune Butler, Ohio, and Brainard Palmer-Ball, Kentucky.

Other original directors were Thomas Wilson (deceased), Kentucky, John Davis (deceased), Ohio, Howard Boland, Illinois, and Marion Johnson, Illinois.

Each charter director there spoke about their respective cooperative's contributions to the formation of the organization.

During the annual meeting, Clarence Boyke, from East Central region of Select Sires, was re-elected president; Bill Genasci, of All West region, re-elected vice president; and Walter Kingery Jr., Va. and N.C. representative, was re-elected second vice president.

The board of directors, made up of representatives from each of the 12 cooperatives, also voted to sample 10 more Holstein young sires in 1992, expanding the goals of the AI organization.

The board also approved action to expand the region of sales to encompass Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

This Year's Pa. Corn Club Program Under Way

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If you grow corn and are interested in improving your production system, the 1991 Pennsylvania Five Acre Corn Club is for you.

The Corn Club is sponsored by The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association and Penn State Cooperative Extension. The Corn Club gives Pennsylvania corn producers an opportunity to compare production practices and yields with other corn growers.

It also gives them an opportunity develop a cost of production budget, which allows them to evaluate their cost of producing corn and how it compares to others in their region. This information can then be used to fine-tune the efficiency of their corn production system.

To enroll in the Corn Club, contact your county extension office by July 1. They can supply you with the necessary entry forms and regulations.

To enroll, you must be 18 or more years old and have a production field that is five acres or more that has had a Penn State soil test within the past two years. If you're considering entering a field, and it does not have a soil test, take one as soon as possible.

If the area is contoured, two or more strips planted to the same hybrid may be entered to obtain the minimum acreage. Participants can enroll in only one of the five harvest class categories, which are 1) shelled corn harvest; 2) ear corn harvest; 3) shelled corn — 3-acre harvest sample; 4) ear corn — machine harvest sample; and 5) corn silage.

For the 3-acre harvest sample, the yield check must be at least three acres and include round trips through the field.

In return for their efforts, club members will receive a complete report of yields and production practices for all members enrolled statewide. In addition, if they request it, they will also receive a detailed report of the actual costs of production they incurred on this particular field.

Last year, 214 corn growers took advantage of this program statewide and the top yields measured were more than 200 bushels/acre. For information on how to sign up for this year's corn club, contact your local county extension office.

Chester Holstein Club Tours Farms

PARKESBURG (Chester Co.) — The Chester County Holstein Club held a March classification barn meeting at the Pinta Lane Farm, owned by Tim and Phyllis Barlow.

Classifier William Weller explained changes in the linear method, deleting Thurl position and adding udder tilt.

Weller said that the classifiers get together four times a year to conciliate with each other on classifying scores.

Also, members had a chance to see three new Excellent cows in the Barlow herd.

Chester County agent Walter Wurster had a few comments on an upcoming tractor safety course. A unit of Cleitus and a unit of Southwind semen were given away as part of door prizes.

The group also toured Maryland farms during the day. Dick Hostetter acted as tour guide to the 40 dairymen and women.

The first stop was at the farm of Bob and Roy Crowl, who have a herd with a rolling average of more than 22,500 pounds of milk.

The next stop was at the Gen Farm No. 1, to see a manure seperator and irrigation system which is used to empty the lagoons. The system supports a commercial milking herd of 680 head. In addition, a seperate herd of high index flush cows is also kept. The commercial herd is used to carry the embryos from the high index cows. No other calves are raised on the farm.

The third stop was at Fair Hill Farm, in Chestertown, Md.

Also visited was Shrader Dairy, an outfit which raises almost all of its own feed, expect for some soybean meal and mineral additives. Also, one of the brothers who run the farm operates a goose hunting business for extra income and use of the land.

The last farm stop was at Pintail

USDA Reports Glowing Success With Research

WASHINGTON-- The firefly's chemical "light bulb" is helping U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) scientists find experimental alternatives to a chemical fumigant used on citrus.

The chemical, methyl bromide, kills the eggs of a citrus pest — the Fuller rose beetle — but also can discolor lemons.

Scientists wanted a fast way to rate possible nonchemical controls such as heat or cold treatments, said plant physiologist Louis H. Aung of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. So he and colleagues use the firefly chemicals — luciferin and luciferase — which produce a glow when mixed with a substance from beetle eggs.

It's a novel use of the two chemicals in a lab technique that dates back 40 years.

An extract from live eggs yields a brighter glow than from dead ones, making the test a "simple, fast and objective way for us to tell what tactics do the best job killing eggs," said Aung in the latest issue of "Agricultural Research" magazine.

Fresno scientists want to fine-tune nonchemical techniques to destroy eggs on stored lemons, yet leave unharmed the fruit's taste, texture and appearance.

But the standard egg-test method slows them down. They have to incubate eggs for at least 16 days at 80 degrees to see if they hatch.

"We want to keep selling the Japanese our high quality lemons, but they don't want discolored lemons — or Fuller rose beetles that could attack their own citrus and other crops," said Aung at the ARS Horticultural Crops Research Laboratory in Fresno, Calif.

Aung and Charles F. Forney, Edwin L. Soderstrom and David G. Brandl at Fresno, along with James I. Moss, now with ARS in Miami, Fla., developed the beetle egg scan to evaluate experimental egg controls.

First, researchers extract from the eggs a compound called ATP (adenosine triphosphate), which all cells require to generate energy and stay alive.

They then mix ATP with a few drops of luciferin-luciferase solution in a lab instrument known as a luminometer.

When ATP reacts with the solution, it briefly emits a glow, which the luminometer detects and reports on a printout.

A relatively weak glow means the egg was dead when the ATP was extracted.

So far, the team has used the technique only to check Fuller rose beetle eggs, but Aung said it might work equally well on eggs of other crop-damaging insects such as codling moth or navel orangeworm.

The snout-nosed, 1/3-inch-long Fuller rose beetle — named for a favorite meal, rose petals — is a minor pest in U.S. citrus.

In nature, female beetles squeeze perhaps six or seven teardrop-shaped eggs into crevices under the "button" — the calyx where lemon and stem meet.

The eggs hatch into slender white maggots. The maggots fall to the ground, burrowing into the soil to feed on roots. Adult beetles crawl up the tree, eat its leaves, and begin the cycle again.

California's Citrus Research Board funded the ARS experiments. Each year, Japan imports about $80 million worth of U.S. lemons, grown mostly in that state and Arizona.

SCS Seeks Volunteers

CHALFONT (Bucks Co.) — April 21-27 was National Volunteer Week. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service (SCS) reminds citizens that volunteers are needed in Bucks County to fight against soil erosion and other natural resource problems.

Retirees, professionals, non-professionals, high school and college students, and anyone else interested in conservation may apply to SCS as a volunteer. Volunteers may work part-time, full-time, outdoors or in the SCS office.

Even though there is no pay for the work, volunteers will have the satisfaction of carrying out some of the most necessary work in the state. Legal and insurance protection is provided for any work-related injury.

Volunteers helping SCS protect the state's natural resources will be personally involved in soil conservation activities at the grass roots level. Working through the Bucks County Conservation District, the SCS helps farmers, ranchers, and other landowners reduce soil erosion, keep streams clean, make the most efficient use of water, and promote good land use.

Volunteers can work on the land with soil conservationists conducting field surveys and planning conservation practices, carry out conservation education activities in schools and with organizations, work in the office, or help in public relations work.

People interested in becoming a volunteer may apply at the SCS office at 530 West Butler Avenue, Chalfont, PA. 18914 or call (215) 822-5840 for more information.

Can Carrots Really Replace Cheese?

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK (Delaware) — Recently, while eating lunch at the local McDonalds, I read the menu and made a discovery that startled me. Among other things, the menu stated very prominently: New — Carrots replace cheese on garden and side salads . . . fewer calories, less fat.

Reading on, I noted they still offer "regular" cheese biscuits, "regular" cheeseburgers, quarter-pounder with "regular" cheese, and pizza with "regular" cheese, but everything else is now changed to lowfat — lowfat shakes, lowfat frozen yogurt and 1 percent milk! Yet, the one item that really hit home was "carrots replace cheese."

Now, if I were simply a diet-conscious consumer, this menu-item replacement would probably make sense. Some people may even say this kind of change is long overdue. However, I am a dairy farmer, and this newly announced company policy on food offerings raises some concern.

As a dairy farmer, my income and that of many suppliers from whom I buy comes primarily from the sale of milk, half of which usually goes into the manufacture of cheese, yogurt, shakes, etc. So the volume of manufacture of these dairy products affects my pocketbook.

If more cheese is made and sold, my price per 100 pounds of milk from the farm goes up, but if less cheese is sold, a surplus may occur, resulting in a drop in milk price. This is simple economics, the law of supply and demand.

In recent months, dairy farmers in this region have seen drastic drops in the milk price on the farm — about 30 percent!

No doubt this means supply is exceeding demand in the regional marketplace, yet my cows continue to produce at the same level and have to be milked every day, twice a day. My bills for electricity, fuel, gas, taxes, buildings, repair, mortgage, etc., continue to come in regardless of whether milk supply in the market is more or less than market demand.

If a major company like McDonalds changes from cheese to carrots in part of its menu, this means a lot of cheese in the market is all of a sudden without a buyer.

Is this just the beginning? Will other restaurant chains and companies reduce the purchase of real cheese or maybe one day stop buying it altogether, replacing it, say, with a soybean imitation cheese? Is a major change in the making?

In the equation of supply versus demand often we have tended to look first at supply. For example, a couple of years ago we killed a lot of cows to reduce milk supply surplus. And we started a 15 cents/100 pounds of farm milk deduction campaign to promote the demand side of milk.

Apparently, though, we are far from having made major gains in the market, given McDonald's menu announcement that they are replacing cheese with carrots. This could very well "kill" many more cows in order to bring the equation into balance, unless we, the dairy farmers and processors, change also.

Or should we? Are we supposed to become more market-oriented in our production procedures and in the promotion of positive health information about our products? Is this where greater profitability lies for the future of the dairy farmer?

Some years ago many of us were convinced that there was nothing better than a glass of Golden Guernsey milk. But what happened to it in the marketplace? Somehow the market has asked for more of another kind of milk: the big winner in recent years was and is the 2 percent milk, for which we dairy farmers have been unable to breed a cow. Or have we been unwilling to try such a change?

Consider other products in the marketplace, like beer for instance. Whoever proved it is as good for you as milk? But beer advertisements successfully make you believe that you feel good after drinking beer (and that includes me!).

Beer manufacturers have even changed to "light"-labeled beer, to appeal to diet-conscious consumers. Possibly one of the differences between dairy farmers and breweries is that dairy farmers only produce but do not process, nor do they devise new processing methods and gimmicks to establish a stronger niche in the marketplace. Breweries, on the other hand, respond more quickly and easily to what the market wants, because they are both producers AND processors.

At the recent annual meeting of our Philadelphia-based Dairy Council, which is affiliated with us dairy farmers, a significant change in policy was announced: Become more market-oriented and inform consumers about the product's qualities that will promote sales. This leaves us dairy farmers in a dilemma. Presumably we are not producing what the majority of the market wants or, at least, not much of it. What can we do? Is it time to change?

Senator Leahy's group recently tried a legislative solution, one which would have solved neither the market supply nor the demand problems. It might well have aggravated the situation, except for an idea that has worked well on the West Coast for some time: increase solids contents in milk, even in 2 percent milk, to a minimum of 10 percent. This is long overdue here, and incidently, the dairy farm business on the West Coast is flourishing.

Now, as we agonize over how best to find a solution to our marketplace problems, there comes along some unexpected good news. In recent years, in fact since the medical findings that milk drinkers and cheese eaters have less colon cancer, fewer dental cavities and less old-age bone deterioration, encouraging news about milk has been rare.

Now, a 10-year British Medical Research Council study of 4,200 middle-aged men from the urban area of Bristol and the rural areas of Wales and conducted at the Llandough Hospital, has found that those men who drank milk every day had significantly fewer heart attacks.

Ten percent of the men studied who had heart attacks did not drink milk, 6.3 percent who drank 1/2 pint milk every day had heart attacks and 5.8 percent who drank 1 pint of milk a day had heart attacks. Only 1.2 percent who drank more than a daily pint of milk had heart attacks.

Furthermore, a comprehensive nutrition study reveals that butter-eaters had half the number of heart attacks of those eating margarine. The research conclusion was that " . . . it is a popular myth that consuming animal fat is bad for the heart. This study found nothing to connect the two."

So, what am I saying? Should we change our cows and our milk production procedures to become more market-oriented? Maybe and maybe not.

The market interests are dynamic and change faster than we can change our cows, but processing methods can and should become more market-oriented. This would help both consumers and dairy farmers. Certainly, it would stimulate consumption if the 30percent recent price drop at the dairy farm had been parallelled in the grocery store!

As representatives to our milk marketing and promotion agencies who spend our 15-cents-per-100-pounds-milk promotion checkoff, we should ask for a greater percentage of this money to go to more medical research for this kind of information. In the long run, this is the most powerful promotion of milk and cheese, and we ought to spread this good news widely.

DPI Fund Drive Sets Record

GEORGETOWN, Del. — The 1991 Fund Drive for Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI) set a record with a total of $485,000 in cash and pledges. That exceeded the $450,000 goal and is 11 percent more than DPI raised last year.

The announcement was made at the recent Delmarva poultry booster banquet by DPI Fund Drive Chairman Dr. Tom Holder.

Holder told the banquet's nearly 2,500 guests that despite the uncertainties caused by the war in Kuwait and Iraq and the slowing of America's economy, "once again, as our investors have done so many times, you have come through to keep DPI continuing its many programs to help our industry."

The DPI Fund Drive is the nonprofit trade association's way of raising money for its extensive services and programs. DPI's membership consists of poultry growers, allied industry suppliers of products and services, Delmarva's eight poultry companies, poultry company employees, and hundreds of non-poultry businesses on Delmarva which recognize the importance of the industry to them. DPI has more than 4,000 members.

In addition to announcing the Fund Drive results, awards were presented to Delmarva's outstanding poultry and egg producers and to two persons who have made significant contributions to Delmarva's poultry industry.

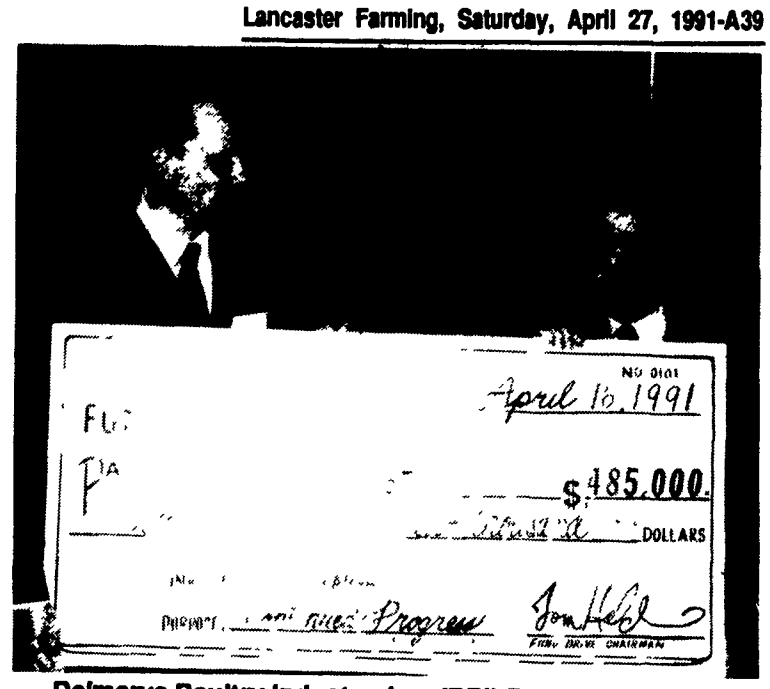
Delmarva's Distinguished Citizen Award was presented to Dr. Keith E. Rinehart, vice president, technical services, Perdue Farms, Inc., Salisbury, Maryland. This award is given in recognition of the recipient's contribution to DPI, the poultry industry, and the community.

Rinehart has served on the DPI board of directors seven years and was DPI president in 1988. He has been active on several DPI committees. On a national level, Rinehart serves on the National Broiler Council Grow-Out Committee, is a member and former chairman of the Technical Advisory Committee of the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Association, is a board member of the Council for Agricultural Science and Technology, and is a past president of the Poultry Science Association.

The DPI Medal of Achievement was presented to Dr. Archibald Park, assistant secretary for animal health and consumer affairs, Maryland Department of Agriculture. This award is given annually to a public servant of an agency or to a member of an organization for outstanding achievement and service on behalf of Delmarva's poultry industry.

With a degree in veterinary medicine, Park has a varied background. He worked for the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), animal disease eradication division, and as liaison between USDA and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and as program chief of the Earth Resources Survey Program. Since joining the Maryland Department of Agriculture in 1984, Park has been active in DPI as a member of the Poultry Health Committee. He has served the industry in other ways, including drafting a memorandum of understanding between Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Virginia to address a plan of action should a highly infectious and contagious disease strike any of the four states. With input from DPI, he developed a poultry price discovery system, known as the "mid-Atlantic quote." He has helped with the DPI grid survey of poultry growers and has provided counsel and advice on other matters.

Another highlight of the banquet was the announcement of Delmarva's outstanding poultry and egg producers. They were selected by their grow-out companies and presented silver bowls by DPI President Alden H. Balfany and Grower Committee Chairman D. William Bruning, Jr. The growers are, from Delaware, Bryan and Doris Mercer, Laurel; Margie and Wayne Murray, Georgetown; and Skip and Cindy Webb, Milford. From Maryland: Ed Brown, Salisbury; Joe and Sarah Chisholm, Pocomoke; Bill and Liz Cottman, Princess Anne; Harry W. and Anna Essick, Easton; John Hales, Salisbury; Michael and Lana Jones, Deal Island; Jim and Bunkie King, Hebron; Sandy Moore, Salisbury; William A. and Linda Moore, Ridgely; Katheryn and Clyde Nichols, Delmar; Howard W. Rickwood, East New Market; Betty and Reginald Riggin, Westover; Herbert and Irene Shockley, Pittsville; James T. Smith, Snow Hill; Frank and Dolly Timmons, Delmar; and James and Betty Wilkins, Salisbury.



Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI) President Alden H. Balfany, left, accepts the DPI Fund Drive check from Fund Drive Chairman Dr. Tom Holder at the recent Delmarva poultry booster banquet in Salisbury, Md. The Fund Drive raised a record high $485,000, 8 percent above the $450,000 goal. The money will be used to finance DPI's many projects to help Delmarva's poultry industry.

earned a B.S. in animal production in 1985 and an M.S. in animal science in 1988 from Penn State, Keith was an active participant in the Block & Bridle Club and the Meats and Livestock Judging Teams as a student. As an instructor since 1985, he has coached the Penn State Livestock Judging Team and was interim co-advisor of the Block & Bridle Club. He has helped with several of the club's activities.

Judges for this year's Little International were beef - Bob Livingston, cattle manager at South Branch Farms in York; horse - Terry Musser, assistant coordinator of the Penn State Crop Management Department; sheep - Jerry McCammon, Cambria County extension agent and youth coordinator; and swine - Alan Wright, an Agway Pro representative from Linwood, N.Y.

Special awards given at the evening banquet included:

• Glenn R. Kean Award for hardworking undergraduate - Kelley Shearer, Lancaster, who is the 1991 Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Queen. Kelley was also voted the Outstanding Junior for 1991.

At the dinner-dance, the club honored the six benefactors they already have whose names are on a plaque displayed in the Penn State Dairy and Animal Science Department. The benefactors are Henry Gruber, Peter Krall, Ned Kocher, Jim Work, Robert Houston, and Victor Houston (in memorium).

The Block & Bridle Club put the saddle donated last year by alumnus Roger Allgeier on the auction block at the dinner-dance. The Pennsylvania Livestock Association (PLA), represented by President Dennis Grumbine, bought the saddle for $2,500. PLA will have a raffle for the saddle at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg in October. Raffle proceeds will also go into the endowment fund.

The Stockmen's Club 1991 Booster Award went to Vern Hazlett, who has been the Penn State swine herdsman for 32 years. Known for his wit, frankness, and family devotion, he has taught many students the art of showing pigs.

Eastern Tent Caterpillars Are Not Gypsy Moth

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Spring in Maryland usually is announced by the appearance of Eastern tent caterpillar nests in trees across the state.

Whether in trees along roadsides or in residential areas, the tent caterpillar, a native of North America, is everywhere.

Wild cherry trees are the favorite host, along with apple, crabapple, plum, peach, rose, hawthorne, and certain shade trees.

Eastern tent caterpillar infestations are often confused with gypsy moth infestation. Gypsy moth caterpillars hatch about two weeks later, do not produce silken webbing along the trunks of trees or silken tents in the branches of trees, and are more commonly found on oak trees than are Eastern tent caterpillars.

Fully grown caterpillars of the two species do not look alike.

Tent caterpillars are up to 2¼ -inches long, with a solid white stripe along the back, and a row of pale blue oval spots along each side. The body is covered by long, fine, light brown hairs.

Gypsy moth caterpillars are about the same size, but are distinguished by five pairs of blue spots, followed by six pairs of red spots on their backs. No other caterpillar has these distinct markings. The caterpillars are covered by long black hairs and many people suffer allergic reactions to contact with the hairs.

Eastern tent caterpillar eggs usually start to hatch in early to mid-April and the young caterpillars, which are only about ¼ -inch long when they hatch, immediately begin building the characteristic silk tents where tree branches join together.

Caterpillars leave the tent only to feed, and continue to enlarge the tent as they grow.

When fully grown, they leave the trees to search for hiding places to spin cocoons. After two weeks in the cocoon, adult moths emerge to mate and the female lays eggs. The egg masses are dark, shiny grey and are laid in a band around a small branch. There is only one generation each year.

If caterpillars are abundant, they may eat all the leaves on a tree. While this may weaken the tree, it seldom kills it.

Defoliated trees should be watered and fertilized, wherever possible. Physical removal of the tents is a good control practice.

High value ornamental plants, or landscape trees that have been defoliated two or three years, can be sprayed with an insecticide during the time the caterpillars are active. Once caterpillars leave the tree, control is much more difficult.

Because the tent caterpillar is a native North American insect, outbreaks are usually controlled by naturally occurring parasites or predators.

For information on ways to control Eastern tent caterpillar or gypsy moth, call your County Cooperative Extension Office or Dr. Robert Rabaglia, Forest Pest Management Section, Maryland Department of Agriculture, (301) 841-5922.

Penn State Will Help Poland Ag

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A team of Penn State agricultural economists will visit Poland this month as part of a USDA Extension Service project to strengthen the country's agricultural sector.

H. Louis Moore, Thomas Brewer, and George Greaser will field test educational materials designed to help Polish agricultural advisers inform their clients about free market economics.

"When we met with officials in both Warsaw and the province of Rzeszow to identify educational needs, we found an overriding need for knowledge about how the free market system works," said Donald Evans, assistant dean for Penn State Cooperative Extension, who visited Poland with Moore and Greaser in February.

The university team has developed materials on farm management, marketing, and agribusiness in an open market economy. Tomasz Adamczyk, an official from the Polish Ministry of Agriculture, worked with the team in February and March to design and translate the materials.

"Poland's agricultural advisory service is well-established, but there is much we can learn from how extension works in the U.S.," Adamczyk said during a recent visit to Penn State. "We want to learn how to work with large numbers of farmers and how to help solve their problems, rather than the problems of the government."

Adamczyk will join the Penn State team in field testing the educational materials in Poland. While in the province of Rzeszow, the group will visit private farms and agribusinesses and conduct workshops and in-service training sessions for Polish field advisers.

Poland has 49 agricultural advisory service offices. Although the country has a strong agricultural research base and industrious farmers, better linkages among research, extension and individual producers could strengthen the agricultural economy. More than two million private farmers own 75 percent of Poland's agricultural land. Most of them farm about 15 acres.

Brewer, who will be teaching the Polish advisers about "western-style" agricultural cooperatives, looks forward to the challenge. "There are a lot of differences between our country and theirs," he said. "But there are even more similarities. For instance, when we visited in February, people everywhere asked us questions like, 'Why are feed prices so high?' or 'When will we get more for our milk?' These are the same kinds of questions Pennsylvania farmers ask."

After the team returns to Penn State at the end of April, they will brief teams from several land-grant universities for the next phase of the ES-USDA project. Later this year, five groups will travel to different parts of Poland for up to six months to design and implement pilot farm managment programs.

Jay Irwin, county extension director for Penn State Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County, and George Greaser will participate in this part of the project.

"Poland faces a challenge the U.S. has never experienced — to adjust to a completely different economic system," Evans said. "Our visit in February revealed the courage and desire of the Polish people to make this transition. They know what they have to do, but they don't know how to do it. They're going from one end of the spectrum to the other, and it's going to be a big adjustment."

Association Honors Top Tomato Growers

NORTHUMBERLAND (Northumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania's top tomato growers for the 1990 growing season were honored at a luncheon during the Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference at Hershey.

The State Champion Tomato Growers' Club is sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Cooperative Extension and Furman Foods of Northumberland.

The club's aims are to stimulate interest in growing tomatoes for processing in the state, to encourage growers to adopt practices which will enable them to effectively produce the best yields of high quality tomatoes, to promote a closer feeling of cooperation between tomato growers and processors, and to give recognition annually to those growers producing outstanding yields. The program had its roots in the 10-Ton Tomato Club, which was active more than 50 years ago.

Furman Farms Inc. of Northumberland won the award for the highest tomato yield in class 1 machine harvest competition for growers with more than 100 acres. Furman Farms harvested 2,738 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 130 acres for a 21.1 tons per acre average yield.

Joe Anchor of New Columbia won the award for the highest tomato yield in class 2 machine harvest competition for growers with 99 to 75 acres. Joe harvested 1,448 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 75 acres for a 19.3 tons per acre average yield.

Cliff harvested 1,652 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods, Violet Packing, and Jordan Packing on 70 acres for a 23.6 ton per acre average yield.

W-J Farms (John Fes and Will Fairchild) of Berwick won the award for the highest tomato yield in class 4 machine harvest competition for growers with 20-49 acres. W-J Farms harvested 1,215 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods from 40 acres for a 30.4 tons per acre average yield.

Robert MacBeth of Biglerville won the award for the highest tomato yield in class 3 hand harvest competition for growers with 24-15 acres. MacBeth harvested 665 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 19 acres for 34.9 tons per acre average yield.

Great Tastes From The Tulip Tour

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (La[illegible] Co.) — What would women enjoy more than taste-testing restaurant specialties, a peek into neighborhood homes for decorating and flower arranging ideas, and a chance to purchase hand-crafted items?

These four loves of many women were combined into a day dubbed "The Tulip Tour" on Monday, April 22. The tour, sponsored by the Ephrata Women's Club, gave participants a chance to examine eight homes that were decorated by florists or greenhouses. At each home, a restaurant chef prepared house specialties for guests to sample, and, at one of the stops, hand-crafted items were for sale.

Recipes for some of the restaurant specialties are listed below:

Sharon's Oyster Pie
Sharon's Seafood

1¼ cups potatoes, diced, par boiled
¾ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
2 dozen stewing oysters
2½ tablespoons flour
salt and pepper
Old Bay seasoning
4 tablespoons margarine
¼ cup oyster liquor
pie dough for top

Preheat oven to 400. Saute onion and celery in 2 tablespoons margarine. Oil pie pan, layer potatoes, onion and celery, then oysters, flour and spices, oyster liquor, 2 tablespoons margarine and top with pie crust. Cut slits in crust and bake 20-25 minutes or until brown. Let sit 5 minutes before serving.

(Turn to Page B3)

Kathy Walls, left, and an assistant from the Old Lincoln House prepared Greek Salad wtih Char-Grilled Chicken.

Sharon Stewart, center owner of Sharon's Seafood, located in Ephrata Farmer's Market served oyster pie, shrimp over linquine, assorted cold seafood salads, and mini-crab balls.

It's the right time to apply lime

Lime application during the winter allows the limestone time to react and gives you the advantage of rich, pH-balanced soil for your spring planting. Winter ground conditions also reduce soil compaction and rutting during spreading.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Those sudden, unseasonable, outbursts always catch me unprepared.

One day it's cold, damp and reminiscent of late March. A day later, July-like temperatures blanket the farm with summer warmth.

Evening milking comfort during 80-plus degrees calls for shorts and T-shirt garb, so I yank open a drawer to dig out warm weather wear. Ahh, my comfort favorites. Faded, soft, well-worn, cutoff jeans.

I pull on the first pair out of storage - and am mystified. They are faded, soft and well-worn. Definitely well-worn. So well-worn in fact that I would be embarrassed to set foot beyond the bedroom door.

Moths don't nibble denim, do they? Then, why would I have put away these more-holes-than-fabric cutoffs? Still, advice from a recent historic fashion program haunts me as I slam-dunk the "hole-y" shorts into the wastebasket.

Historic garment collections are skewed, York Historic Society's Tamara Funk told her farm women audience. Items saved leaned to special-occasion garb, like wedding dresses, or those of smaller sizes and costly fabrics. Clothes of "average" size and everyday fabrics were more likely to be used, reused, remade, handed down and eventually turned to rags. And virtually no one saved work clothes.

Maybe here's where I can do my part. We have a wealth of interesting work clothes around here. Maybe they should be saved — for history.

Old hats are always fascinating, especially those wide-brimmed fashionable, beribboned, beflowered ones we see in museums. My favorite hat has many stories, threaded through the loose-woven red acrylic yarns of its shapeless form. Bits of hay and straw offer clues to its mornings of throwing down feed and bedding, intermingled with dust from the bin holding the heifers grain-chop rations. Twigs and leaves attest to bird-watching walks.

That hat was old ten years ago when the kids poked fun at it. It should soon reach museum status. Maybe it should be saved — for history.

Would posterity ever understand how we treasured our sturdy, insulated coveralls? Could they appreciate their value when moving hay through biting January winds whipping around icy barn corners, for feeding a shivering newborn calf or for plowing snow to get the milk truck in on schedule? It would take lengthy descriptions to relate their equal usefulness for icy, moonlight walks, cross-country skiing and family sledding excursions.

Those pairs of coveralls are part of our family heritage. Maybe they should be saved — for history.

And the quilted flannel shirts. Santa leaves quilted flannel shirts under our holiday tree as faithfully as the tree leaves needles. New ones get tucked away for mountain cabin weekends, deer hunting and farm sales, bumping the prior year's into the everyday use lineup. Gear lube, diesel fuel and manure splatters penetrate the fibers, discolor the bright plaids and result in frequent hot-water-laundry attempts at restoration. I retrieve them from pickups and barn office, hay mow, kitchen table and basement floor. The youngest rarely exits the house October through May without one.

Faded, patched, repatched, and worn beyond salvage, they are folded and laid out one last time. Too threadbare for his taste, the dog shuns the ragged shirts and opts for a softer bed of loose heifer hay. Maybe a few should be saved — for history, of course.

And, of course, blue jeans. Garment symbol of outdoor lifestyle, of rugged individualist, of agrarian pursuit. Of hay and horses and hiking and honest hard work. We literally live in jeans, beating the stiff blue fabric of new into soft submission with manure, oil, dairy cleaners, cow hair, hay bales and repeated encounters with damp tractor seats, sharp metal parts and protruding nails. Chopped off after repeated patching to the knee-area, we resurrect jeans to a second, "shorts"-lived, existence.

Guilt-ridden, I retrieve the ragged cutoffs and reconsider. Should they be saved — for history, of course?

On second thought, I don't really want to go down in history as having bared quite that much in my life.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Some recipes just shout out, "Spring is here!" Two of my favorite springtime recipes are for fruit salad and quiche.

Fruit salad dressings are a breeze to make in your microwave. They're cooked in minutes with little stirring and no messy pan to clean up. Microwaving is especially an advantage for the egg-based dressing in Old-Fashioned Overnight Fruit Salad (below), which would need to be cooked for a very long time in the top of a double boiler.

Notice that both dressings are cooked in a measure and whisked or stirred at regular intervals. Stirring as directed is important in the cornstarch-based dressing to prevent lumps and in the egg-based dressing to prevent curdling or separating. Be careful not to cook too long. Otherwise the cornstarch-based dressing will become thin and the egg-based dressing will separate and be streaked with specks of cooked egg.

Cheesy Spinach Pie starts with a simple crust that can be made right in the pie plate. Microwave the crust first, then add the filling and microwave on Medium High, which is 70 percent power or about 450 watts. Or, you may microwave it on High power first for five minutes, stir the cooked outside edges to the center and finish cooking on Medium, which is 50 percent power or 325 to 350 watts for 10 to 15 minutes. In either case, rotate the dish at least once during cooking and let the finished pie set until its firm and easy to cut.

Light Waldorf Salad

¾ cup water
½ cup white vinegar
½ cup honey
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
2 to 3 apples, diced
2 cups miniature marshmallows
¼ to ½ cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Stir together water, vinegar, honey, cornstarch, dry mustard and celery seed until smooth in a microwavable 1-quart measure. Microwave (High) 4 to 5 minutes, stirring after each 2 minutes, or until boiling and thickened. Cool. Stir in apples, marshmallows and walnuts. Serve immediately or chill before serving. Makes 8 to 9 servings.

Each serving—1/9th of recipe: 151 calories, 1 gram protein, 21 grams fat, 34 grams carbohydrate, 7 mg sodium, 0 cholesterol.

VARIATION: Prepare dressing, substituting 1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves for the celery seed. Cool and stir in 3/4 teaspoon poppy seeds. Before serving, toss with your choice of cut-up fresh fruit.

Old-Fashioned Overnight Fruit Salad

2 large eggs
½ cup orange juice*
¼ cup lemon juice*
¾ cup sugar
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
1 20-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained
1 11-ounce can mandarin oranges, drained
4 cups (about ½ pound) miniature marshmallows
2 cups green grapes
½ cup coarsely chopped pecans
2 to 3 cups sliced bananas, diced unpeeled apples, diced fresh peaches or other fruit

With a wire whisk, beat eggs until well combined in a microwavable 1-quart measure. Stir in orange juice, lemon juice and sugar. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 4 minutes, whisking or stirring well after each 2 minutes. Then, continue microwaving (Medium) 2 to 3 minutes, whisking or stirring well after each 1 minute, until mixture is thick. Do not overcook. Chill until cold (about 1 hour).

Whip cream until soft peaks form; fold in chilled mixture. Gently fold in pineapple, manadarin oranges, marshmallows, grapes and pecans. If using fruits which darken when cut surfaces are exposed to air — such as bananas, apples and fresh peaches—fold in right before serving. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

*For best flavor, use freshly squeezed unstrained juices.

Each serving—1/12th of recipe: 274 calories, 3 g protein, 11 g fat, 45 g carbohydrate, 39 mg sodium, 58 mg cholesterol.

Cheesy Spinach Pie

¼ cup margarine or butter
¾ cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt (optional)
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded sharp reduced fat Cheddar cheese
3 eggs
1 cup half-and-half
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
½ to 1 teaspoon onion powder
½ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
¼ teaspoon salt (optional)
⅛ teaspoon ground pepper
1 10-ounce package chopped spinach, drained and squeezed dry
1 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded sharp reduced fat Cheddar cheese, divided

In microwavable 9-inch regular or deep pie plate, melt margarine by microwaving (High) 30 to 40 seconds. Using a fork, stir in 3/4 cup flour, dry mustard and 1/4 teaspoon salt (if used) until mixture is crumbly. Stir in 1 cup Cheddar cheese, breaking up shreds, until well mixed. With a fork or fingers, pat dough into pie plate, forming edges first and then patting dough evenly into center. Microwave (High) 3 to 5 minutes, rotating pie plate and watching carefully during last part of cooking. Crust is done when it starts to look dry and blistered and feels firm. Set aside while preparing filling.

In a medium bowl or measure, beat eggs until combined. Stir in half and half, 1 tablespoon flour, onion powder, thyme leaves, 1/4 teaspoon salt (if used) and pepper until smooth. Stir in well-drained spinach, mushrooms and only 1/2 cup of remaining Cheddar cheese. Pour into crust. Cover with microwave paper or waxed paper. Microwave on Medium High (70 percent power, about 450 watts) 13 to 17 minutes, rotating pie plate after 7 minutes. Pie is done when center looks set and a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Sprinkle with remaining 1/2 cup Cheddar cheese and cover loosely with microwave paper or plastic wrap. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes. Cut into wedges and serve warm. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Each serving—1/8th of recipe: 258 calories, 14 g protein, 17 g fat, 13 g carbohydrate, 363 mg sodium, 113 mg cholesterol.

You Are What You Eat

Those who use herbs in foods and beverages for health purposes are no longer considered health-food nuts. Nutritional studies show that diet is the cornerstone of therapy for heart disease, cancer, high cholesterol, osteoporosis, overweight, and high blood pressure.

Many of today's recipes are taken from Prevention's Meals That Heal Cookbook by the editors of Rodale Press. For more information, write to them at Emmaus, PA 18098.

Another interesting cookbook that you might want to purchase if you would like to know more about vegetables, herbs, and edible flowers is Recipes From A Kitchen Garden developed by Renee Shepherd and Fran Raboff of Shepherd's Garden Seeds.

Thanks to our readers who mailed healing tips and recipes. Mrs. Melvin Troyer of Hartly, Del., suggests that burns heal faster, if you puncture a vitamin E capsule and put the pure oil directly on the burn or any sore. This heals it quickly and prevents scars from forming.

Troyer suggests for relief from mosquito bites, moisten a bar of soap and rub it on the bite. It will stop itching and act as a disinfectant to prevent infection.

To cure diarrhea, Troyer said, Stir one cup of raw oatmeal into 3 cups of boiling water. Let stand several minutes. Pour off water and give to patient or put the liquid in a bottle for a baby. The water is also good to rub on encema or diaper rash. Betty Biehl of Mertztown reminds readers to eat fruit and drink juice on a daily basis. For a cold, she uses the home remedy of a tablespoon of honey with orange juice and a little lemon.

HOT FRUIT PUNCH

3 cups sugar
2 cups water
¼ to ½ cup red cinnamon candies
2 quarts cranberry juice
2 cups lemon juice
2 cups orange juice

Boil sugar and water. Dissolve candies in syrup and strain. Add the juice and heat thoroughly. Contributor writes: Delightful hot beverage to serve. It's good for a bad cold.

Prevention Foods That Heal

Beets rate high in nutrition and low in calories. A cup contains only 58 calories. The same amount gives us as much potassium as a potato. Beet greens score even higher in nutritional value. A cup of cooked beet greens has more iron than a hamburger pattie, more potassium than a serving of French fries, and 14 times the Vitamin A of a lettuce salad.

SWEET POTATO-APPLE CASSEROLE

1¼ pounds sweet potatoes
½ cup water
1 pound apples
1 cup apple juice
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons water
½ cup honey
⅓ cup wheat germ

Steam potatoes in ½ cup water until tender, 15 to 20 minutes. Peel and slice them lengthwise in ½ -inch-thick slices. Layer them in casserole.

Peel and core apples, slicing them ½ -inch thick. Lay apple slices on top of sweet potatoes.

Heat apple juice to the boiling point. Combine cornstarch and water and add to juice, cooking until sauce is clear and thickened. Add honey.

Spoon sauce over apples, then top with wheat germ.

Bake in a 350 degree oven until apples are tender, 30 minutes to an hour. Serves 6.

Good for cancer prevention.

This year's state winner of the Pennsylvania Beef Cookoff is no stranger to cooking contests. A contestant in numerous cooking contests, and a finalist in the past three state beef cookoffs, Roger "Rocky" Brown, of Carmichaels, Pa., impressed the panel of judges with his Steak Putanesca recipe.

In addition to receiving more than $300 in prizes, Brown has earned an expenses-paid trip to compete against other state winners in the National Beef Cookoff, to be held in Colorado Springs, Col., in September.

STEAK PUTANESCA
Preparation Time: 20 minutes
Cooking Time: 25 minutes
Serves Six

6 beef tenderloins, 1-inch thick, 4 ounces each, salt/pepper to taste
2 tablespoons butter, divided
1/4 Cup finely chopped shallots
1 large garlic clove, minced
3 whole canned Italian tomatoes, chopped, 1/2 cup of the juice from canned tomatoes reserved
2 tablespoons sun-dried tomatoes, chopped
3 tablespoons chopped, pitted imported black olives
1 teaspoon capers
1/2 teaspoon rosemary leaves
1 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1/3 Cup canned concentrated beef broth
2 tablespoons olive oil
Whole imported black olives
Chopped fresh parsley
Parsley sprigs
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Season the filets with salt and pepper to taste and set aside.

In a small heavy saucepan, melt 1 tablespoon of the butter and saute the shallots and garlic for 2 to 3 minutes. Add chopped tomatoes, the 1/2 cup of reserved tomato juice, sun-dried tomatoes, chopped black olives, capers, rosemary leaves and red pepper flakes. Stir well, and simmer, stirring occasionally, for 5 minutes.

Stir in the beef broth and continue to cook and simmer until slightly thickened, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat, stir in the remaining tablespoon of butter and season to taste with salt and pepper. Keep sauce warm.

Heat the olive oil in a large skillet over moderately high heat and brown the beef filets for approximately 8 to 10 minutes, or until desired doneness, turning once.

Transfer the filets to a warm serving platter and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and chopped parsley. Garnish with parsley sprigs and whole black olives before serving.

7 eggs
½ teaspoon dry mustard
3½ cups milk
Swiss or American cheese
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste

Trim off bread crusts. Butter bread and place evenly in well greased 9x13-inch pan. Cover entire bottom. Cover bread with slices of cheese. Beat eggs slightly, add salt, mustard, and pepper. Add milk to egg mixture. Pour over bread and cheese. Cover dish with foil and refrigerate overnight. Bake covered in 325 degree oven for 1 hour. Uncover for last 10 minutes for a golden brown look.

Fried sausage or crumbled bacon may be added before the cheese.

Oat Bran Cuts Cholesterol

Minneapolis, MN — A new scientific study in last week's Journal of the American Medical Association supports the idea that oats or oat bran added to a low fat diet can have a greater effect on blood cholesterol than simply a low fat diet alone.

The study was conducted by a team of scientists led by Michael Davidson at Rush- Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago. They found that two to three ounces of oat bran added for six weeks to each day's diet of subjects with high cholesterol levels could lower a high cholesterol level by 7%-10%.

As demand for oats and oat products increases, the United States is forced to import oats due to decreasing domestic production. The inequities in the Farm Program have created disincentives for American producers to grow oats while the available global supply continues to pressure the U.S. market price.

Plenty Of Work, Little Dough For Pretzel Twisters

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Almost 200 years ago, a hobo gave a baker a 1,000 year-old recipe for pretzels in exchange for a piece of bread.

Julius Sturgis, an apprentice for the baker, made the pretzels and gave them to his wife and 14 children. They loved them. Sturgis began sharing them with friends and neighbors. The pretzels became so popular that Sturgis turned his Lititz bread bakery into a pretzel bakery.

Officially, Sturgis is known as the first pretzel maker in America.

It is said that pretzels were originally made by a monk of the monasteries in Southern France or Northern Italy. He used scraps of dough left over from bread baking to form the strips of dough to represent children's arms folded in prayer. He gave the "pretiola," which means "little reward" to the children who knew their prayers. The three holes within the pretzel represent the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

It is fabled that the pretzels were always soft until a young baker fell asleep on his job and baked a batch of pretzels too long. The fire died down and turned the soft pretzels into a golden crispness. That was the beginning of hard pretzel baking.

Today, the Julius Sturgis Pretzel House at 219 East Main Street in Lititz still makes pretzels.

And, they give tours every 10 minutes to visitors who would like to learn how to make a pretzel.

When you enter the original pretzel house of Julius Sturgis, you are given a pretzel for a ticket and a baker's hat to wear.

The smell of dough rising fills the building. A tour guides leads the visitors into a room where the original brick ovens still line the wall.

Visitors are given a piece of dough, about the size of a baseball. Each person rolls his or her dough to about 12 inches long on a wooden table. The tour guide explains how to twist a pretzel.

First, the dough is placed in a U shape. The ends are crossed to form rabbit ears. Then the ends are twisted and pulled back to rest on the loop.

The guides who are experienced with pretzel twisting work so fast that you can barely see their fingers move. But, for the beginner, pretzel twisting is very slow.

Visitors who complete the class earn certificates that prove they are official pretzel twisters and can be hired by the bakery. Because the certificates are dated 1861, the twisters will be paid the going wage, which is only two cents for each 100 pretzels twisted.

Although 10 percent of the prezels are still hand twisted at Sturgis bakery, the remaining is now manufactured by machine. No one touches the dough from start to finish. The person who opens a bag of pretzels is the first to touch the pretzel.

The Pretzel House manufactures 245 pretzels a minute to make five tons of pretzels a day.

The Julius Sturgis Pretzel House, 219 East Main Street, Lititz, is open for tours Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. It costs $1.50 per person for adults and children. You do not need to make reservations since tours are given every 10 minutes.

Plenty of pretzels and gift items can be purchased in the gift shop at the Pretzel House.

SOFT PRETZEL

Although the recipe for Sturgis pretzels is a secret recipe, the Pretzel House shares this recipe for you to make.

1 package active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
1½ cups warm water
⅓ cup brown sugar
5 cups flour
coarse salt

Dissolve yeast in ¼ cup warm water. Stir in 1½ cups warm water, ⅓ cup brown sugar and flour. Beat until smooth. Knead until smooth and elastic.

Heat oven to 475 degrees.

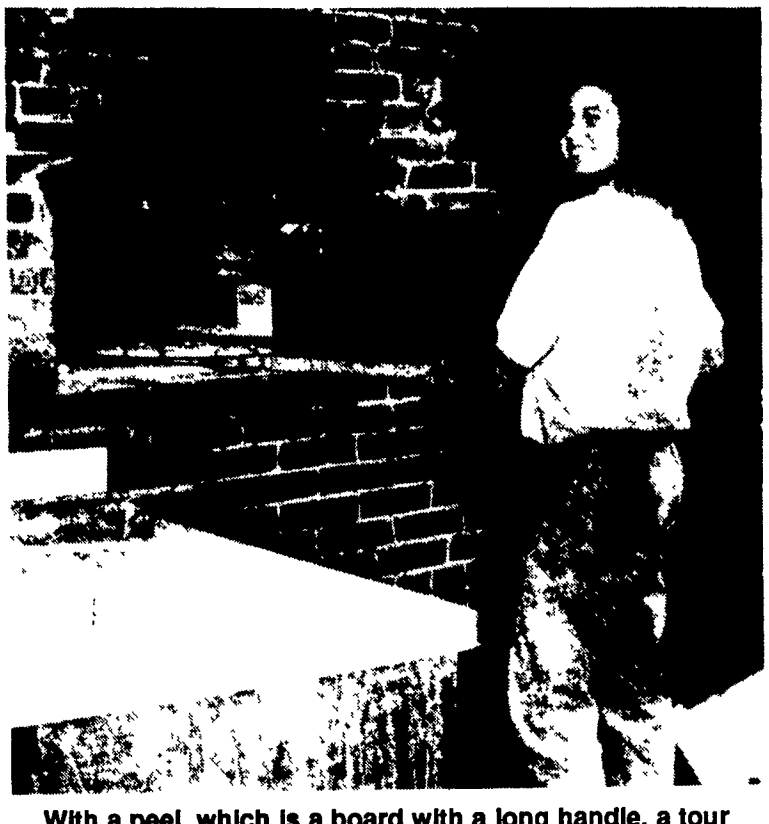
In a saucepan, measure 2 tablespoons baking soda to each cup of water. Place enough to fill saucepan. Boil soda and water.

Place twisted pretzel in water for 15 seconds until pretzel dough is golden or yellow in color. Remove pretzel from boiling water and place on salted cookie sheet. Salt top of pretzel with coarse salt.

Place cookie sheet with pretzels into oven and bake for 8 to 10 minutes until pretzel is golden brown. Eat.

After completing the tour, these girls sample soft pretzels made from the secret recipe that a hobo gave to a Lititz baker.

Those who visit the Sturgis Pretzel House in Lititz are taught the art pretzel twisting. A diploma is awarded to participants, and is cherished as a momento of the pretzel tour.



With a peel, which is a board with a long handle, a tour guides places pretzels in the oven. After she places the peel in the oven, she gives it a jerk that lets the pretzels lying on the oven floor for baking.

This large pretzel sets outside the Sturgis Pretzel House. The pretzels were first made by a monk who used scrapes of bread dough to make tidbits for children who said their prayers.

TAKING TIME

by Rebecca Wolf

Extension Home Economist

As the World Turns

Most of the Pennsylvania farming communities have not been affected by the mandated recycling laws, but that doesn't mean that rural residents should not be concerned.

Global economic and environmental issues are 1990's topics. You as parents and consumers play a critical part in addressing these issues. The choices you make speak clearly to manufacturers, politicians, and children.

What are you saying?

Remember, you speak both with actions and words. Do you buy lunchbox items in individual servings, or do you buy a larger container and measure out a serving into a reuseable plastic container? When you pick up a gallon of milk at the store, do you allow the checker to bag it, or do you volunteer to carry it without a bag? Do you run your shower for five minutes before you get in, or do you run the water for 15 seconds to test the temperature? Do you ignore the waste, or do you write a note to a cosmetics company that packages its product in a metal tube inside a clear plastic wrapper which is then glued inside a large cardboard casing?

Each choice you make speaks clearly to those around you about what you value. Each choice casts a vote.

I am thankful for the messages my parents gave me about recycling and careful use of resources! I have been rinsing and smashing soup cans and bundling newspapers since I was young even though it was not required in the rural township where I grew up.

As an educator, I emphasize two principles to adults that can be applied to this issue of taking care of the environment. First, it is much easier to establish good habits than it is to break bad ones. (Consider how difficult it is to quit smoking after years of depending on cigarettes.) Helping children establish good routines will allow them to carry on those practices as adults with little effort.

Secondly, children are constantly watching and absorbing your behavior. Have you ever heard your child talk to a friend using YOUR words or tone of voice? What a reminder that is of how much they are learning from us even when we are not teaching them intentionally. If you reuse, recycle, control waste through planned purchases, and express your concerns to community and state leaders, your children will have role models to follow as they attempt to grow and thrive in a time of world-wide challenges.

What are some things you can do to set a positive example for the children who are watching you?

• Plan your travel. Make sure that you make as few stops and do as little backtracking as possible. On weekends or in the evening, bike to a neighbor's house rather than driving.

• The next time you change the oil in your car, take the used motor oil to a garage for recycling. It only takes one gallon of used motor oil to make 2.5 quarts of new oil. It takes 42 gallons of crude oil to make the same 2.5 quarts!

• Fill that empty spray bottle with a homemade window cleaning solution. These solutions don't add unnecessary colors, fragrances, or chemicals. You will save money in addition to protecting your air and water supply. You also will be reusing a container that might have been thrown away.

• Plant a tree. Each tree that is planted will absorb carbon dioxide from the air. The tree may also provide shade for your home which helps reduce summer cooling costs. Birds and other wildlife will make homes in the branches. Make this an annual event.

• Turn in those plastic shopping bags that are labeled "recycleable". Supermarkets have begun placing bins in their lobbies for this purpose. If you pick up any groceries, remember to use bags from previous trips. Some stores are offering a small refund for reusing the sacks. I try to keep two spare grocery bags in my car trunk all the time. If just 25% of American homes used 10 fewer plastic bags a month, we'd save over 2.5 billion bags a year.

• Turn the water faucet off when you brush your teeth. If you just wet and rinse the brush, you use only 1/2 gallon of water instead of nearly 9 gallons each time you brush. This conserves water. It also lowers your water bill.

If you take the time to follow a few ideas, you will be helping to improve the world. You will also be setting a positive example for the children around you.

Plan Before You Landscape

RUTGERS (Hunterdon Co.) — Planning and research should precede a visit to the local nursery; a successful landscape is a complex undertaking. A few basic tips should help you avoid some of the most common landscape mistakes.

• Too many plants for the area- Plants should be spaced for final result rather than immediate effect. Keep in mind the mature size of plants and plan room for them to grow. Over-planting will result in plants having to be moved after a couple of years, or annual pruning will become an impossible chore. If the sparse appearance of proper new landscaping is a problem, fill in with temporary herbaceous plantings. Ground covers quickly give a "finished" look to a new landscape planting.

• Too many different kinds of plants in an area- The "one-of-everything" landscape usually doesn't work well. Better to limit the number of varieties used and plant groups or masses of a variety, except where single specimen plants may be appropriate.

• Wrong size plant- Too often plants that will be much too big for the site are planted. In choosing landscape plants, find out about the mature size. Mature sizes are only approximations but it certainly helps to know whether the shrub to go under the front window grows to 3 feet or 30 feet. Pruning to keep plants that are genetically destined to be large confined to a small space is usually a losing proposition.

• Plants growing in inappropriate locations- Match the plant choices to the conditions that exist: shade, sun, wet, dry, windy. Trying to grow plants under conditions they don't like is asking for problems and disappointments. Find out, before buying, conditions needed by the plants being considered for planting.

• One-season landscape- The planting looks great but only for part of the year. Give special consideration to year-round characteristics of plants being selected for use in highly visible areas. For instance, azaleas are glorious in spring, satisfactory in summer but not great in winter; they shouldn't be the dominant planting for the front yard. A year round landscape doesn't mean evergreens only, just careful choices of plant materials.

Easy to prepare, nutritious and versatile, rice is the world's most important food. This staple grain for two-thirds of the world's population, its significance can not be overemphasized. The United States, one of the largest exporters of rice, is an important grower of this versatile food. Worldwide, man gets 20% of his energy and 13% of his protein from this simple grain. Though it has long been recognized as the backbone of Asian agriculture and cuisine, rice today is grown in more than 100 countries and on every continent, except Antarctica.

Worldwide there are thousands of different varieties of rice, though only a few offer the quality characteristics acceptable to be grown in the U. S. Three types of rice are grown: long grain, medium grain and short grain.

Long grain rice is 4 to 5 times as long as it is wide. When cooked, the grains tend to remain separate and are light and fluffy.

Medium grain rice is plump in shape, but not round. When cooked, these grains are more moist and tender than long grain.

Short grain rice is almost round in shape, and tends to cling together when cooked.

Regular-milled white rice has been completely milled so that the hulls and the bran layers have been removed from the grain.

Parboiled rice has undergone a special process before milling which makes the cooked grains extra fluffy and separate.

Brown rice results from the kernel from which only the hull has been removed. Its natural tan color comes from the bran layers left on the grain. Cooked brown rice has a nutty flavor and slightly chewy texture.

Precooked rice is the fastest cooking rice of all. Completely cooked and dehydrated, it takes only minutes to prepare.

For best cooking results, always follow the directions given on the package.

Rice is an excellent source of complex carbohydrates. Complex carbohydrates are an important part of everyone's diet. In fact, nutritionists recommend at least one-half the calories consumed should come from complex carbohydrate foods like rice and other grains, fruits and vegetables.

Rice is also low in calories. A one half-cup serving of cooked rice supplies only 82 calories.

The protein content of rice, while limited, is superior to that provided by other cereal grains. The presence of all eight of the essential amino acids in proper proportion allows the protein to be effectively utilized.

Most white rice is enriched to bring its nutritional value similar to that of whole grain (brown) rice.

Rice also contains only a trace of fat and is cholesterol and sodium free. A one half-cup serving of cooked white rice provides 82 calories, 1.5 grams protein, 0.1 grams fat, and 18.15 grams of carbohydrates. It is also non-allergenic and gluten-free, excellent for diets restrictive in these factors. Rice is a wholesome, nutritious food and has qualities which make it ideally suited for special dietary needs.

Kutztown Folk Festival Prepares Quilts

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.)—The time is quickly drawing near when both "Plain" and "Fancy" Pennsylvania Dutch women will bring their quilts to enter them in the 27th Annual Quilting Contest, where 38 prize-winning quilts will receive almost $6,000 in prize money.

During the 42nd Annual Kutztown Folk Festival, which will be held from Saturday, June 29, through Sunday, July 7, visitors will find 1,700 quilts to see or to buy and none of them will be priced more than $500. Visitors may watch the ladies as they quilt at the frame; these women will be happy to answer any questions, so that visitors may go home and try quilting for themselves.

Naturally, quilting is not the only activity to be found at this summer's Folk Festival. Visitors will also find sheep shearing, a children's puppet show, metal casting in sand, garden tours, Dr. Bumstead's medicine show, and a re-enactment of an Amish wedding. The Folk Festival also offers over 200 working 18th and 19th Century craftsmen, each of whom is demonstrating his skill, so that visitors will see how Americans lived before the age of mass-production.

The Hoedown Stage, Seminar Stage, and Main Stage will also be busy as usual with programs that are designed to entertain and inform visitors about life in early and modern-day Pennsylvania Dutch Country. Another favorite with visitors is all the delicious and freshly made Pennsylvania Dutch food that is available at the Folk Festival each day. All-you-can-eat dinners, which include schnitz un knepp (dumplings and apples) and pot pie, to eat-as-you-go snacks, such as funnel cake and ox-roast sandwiches are available.

If you want a copy of the newly designed brochure, which includes a map of the grounds and schedules of events, please call 1-800-447-9269. Anyone interested in receiving a copy of the rules for entering the Annual Quilting Contest, please send your request to Ann Burrows, contest supervisor, Kutztown Folk Festival, 461 Vine Lane, Kutztown, PA 19530.

Quilts displayed at the Kutztown Folk Festival are eligible for prize money. Visitors at the Festival can observe quilting and other craftspersons at work.

Berks Co. Quilt Harvest Documents Cultural Heritage

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

READING (Berks Co.) — A quilt showing a patchwork of animals, many of them farm animals, is a testament that this painstaking homemaking art was not just the domain of women.

The patches on the quilt, dated around 1913, were sewn by then 5-year-old Clarence H. Bowman, said his daughter, Janice Kozlowski of Exeter Township.

Kozlowski and her husband, Stanley, had taken the quilt to the Gov. Mifflin Intermediate School during one of five harvesting days of the Berks County Quilt Harvest, an in-depth research project of the Historical Society of Berks County. It is sponsored by Penn Savings Bank.

In showing her quilt, kept tucked away in moth balls, Kozlowski said all she knows about it is that after the daily chores were done on the family's dairy farm in Douglass Township, the little boy would sit in his chair and sew the patches under the supervision of his mother, Eva Bowman.

The patches, sewn with red thread, depict cows, sheep, pigs, as well as circus seals, zebras, clowns, and other things a child would fancy.

"He sewed the little squares, and she quilted them," Kozlowski said.

Although Clarence is now dead, Kozlowski said he never mentioned his early career as a quilter. For the quilt had been stored away for years, she said. And as more masculine pursuits captured his interest, he probably forgot about it, she said.

But Kozlowski didn't. Along with several hundred other Berks Countians one warm Saturday in April, she made sure this cherished quilt has its place in history.

P. Allison DuPont, coordinator of the project, said the information on the quilts will be kept by the historical society in an effort to preserve this heritage.

"It's disappearing," the Kutztown resident said about the art of quilting, although there has been a resurgence of interest in quilts in the last 10 years.

Quilts purchased 10 years ago for a few dollars are now worth hundreds of dollars. DuPont stressed that all of the information obtained by the society will be kept confidential and no monetary appraisals of the quilts will be done. "This is for serious researchers, not antiques dealers," she said.

A major quilt exhibit, using information gathered in the harvest, is scheduled for sometime in 1992.

People with quilts are asked to also bring any documents related to the quiltmakers, such as photographs, portraits, journals, letters and diaries.

Jane Levan of Oley R.D. ,1 brought a child's bonnet of quilted muslin. The long back piece of the bonnet shielded a child's neck and ears from long hours of being in the sun, she said.

Levan showed old photos of her grandmother-in-law and her daughter, who made a sampler quilt on their 10-acre farm. It was one of nine quilts Levan brought to be documented. There's no way of knowing how many quilts there are in Berks County, DuPont said, but close to 1,000 have been documented so far. The condition of the quilts doesn't matter.

"What we're looking for is a trend in techniques and patterns indigenous to the area," she said. "The Pennsylvania Dutch area really loves color. There are very few with a white background." Primary colors of red and mustard-yellow are a hallmark of many of the quilts she has seen.

"This is our (women's) culture; we've got to document it," said Gail Dawson-White, Penn Savings director of corporate affairs, whose idea it was to engage in such a harvest. "The important thing is this is a woman's art form." The amount of detail on an all-white quilt, patterned with an elaborate, filligree-like design, shows just how many thousands of times needle and thread went through each quilt, with no two ever alike.

But back at the turn of the century, a woman could be focused on the rich design of a quilt, as her leisure time — if she had any — was often devoted to sewing.

"They were busy every minute of the day," said Cordelia Funk of Reading, as Rosie Mutter of Bechtlesville, a quilt harvest volunteer, carefully looked over a quilted petticoat of Funk's. "This was their social and relaxation activity," Funk said. "That and visitors." The Berks Countians bring their treasured quilts to the Quilt Harvest in Gov. Mifflin Intermediate School. The harvest is a research project of the Historical Society of Berks County and sponsored by Penn Savings Bank to document all of the quilts made in Berks County.

white petticoat, probably made in the 1890s, has an 18-inch waist, leading her to believe it was made for a teen-aged girl. Quilted petticoats were common back then, Funk said, as they helped keep a girl warm.

"Then, you wore long underwear, too," Funk added.

Before the harvest began in March, DuPont trained 140 volunteers to look for specific aspects of each quilt, such as number of stitches per inch, as part of the documentation.

"I just love it," said Kathy Tauber of Phoenixville, about her job as documentor. Tauber said her own experience with making a quilt once gave her some background for the volunteer job.

After each quilt is documented, the owner is given a booklet describing how to fold and preserve it. Special acid-free boxes are available in which to store the quilts.

The harvest is only concentrating on quilts made before 1940 when quilts were made with natural fibers, such as cotton, silk and wool, DuPont said. After 1940, polyesters came into use, she said. A favorite backing material of farm-family quilts was feed bags, with the brand name showing prominently, she said. "Husbands were ordered to get certain kinds of feed especially for the bags," she said.

One of the most unusual quilts DuPont and Dawson-White have seen was one made solely out of cigar bands, she said. She explained that cigar manufacturers in Reading and Boyertown used to wrap the bundles with yellow, silk ribbons. This particular quilt was made by sewing hundreds of these bands together.

"Cigar-band quilts are unique to this area," DuPont said. The final harvest date is scheduled for Saturday, May 18, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., in Conrad Weiser Senior High School, Robesonia. There is no charge for the documentation.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

When I read my diaries from 10 and 20 years ago, I am amazed at all of the activities that were going on at our house.

The children always seemed to have someplace to go — either 4-H, church, school, shopping or a friend's house. And, a lot of these things required me to drive them there as we live in an isolated area.

They also had work to do here at home in the fields, barn and garden. The neighbors often asked them to babysit in the nearby development. One night my daughter babysat at a house next door to one that was burglarized. That was quite scary for her.

If I think that I do a lot of things now, it is no comparison to how much I accomplished them. I had to clean the house much more often than I do now as eight people living in a house do drag in a lot of dirt. Now, once a week seems sufficient to get out the vacuum. Then I swept the kitchen and porches twice a day.

My girls baked most every day either for us or for some group that wanted cookies to sell. Even the boys baked pies when they thought we didn't have enough on hand to please them. It is seldom that I use yeast, but when the girls were home we often had sticky buns and homemade pizza.

When our children lived with us, we also had our parents to care for and that added to our responsibilities. Now we are the older generation, but I'm hoping we can take care of ourselves for many more years.

Farm Family's New Ventures Never End

AGNES R. SMITH
Northampton Co. Correspondent

MT. BETHEL (Northampton Co.) — A potpourri of activity surrounds this 100-acre farm nestled in view of the Delaware Water Gap, where Todd and Linda Dean work together on his mother's farm.

Apple trees line the entrance road to the homestead, which are in blossom. Peaches, pears and other fruit trees make up a beautiful array of spring color. Freshly plowed fields are being prepared for planting.

This is the time of year that the Dean's send out brochures about their farm tour for schools, day care centers, and church organization. The children are given a full walking tour of 2 hours. The options include a petting zoo, a cider press in operation, demonstration of how to plant seeds and showing of a plant with a root system already started. The children are treated to cider and donuts and given a paper container full of soil to plant two bean seeds. These are taken home and watered so the children can watch the plants grow.

The fall tour is basically run the same way except the children are allowed to go into the field and pick one pumpkin to take home. The fees for the tours are printed in the brochure. The children learn a lot seeing this farm firsthand.

Picking your own strawberries, peas and beans is a major attraction in the summer months. The apples and other tree fruit will not be among the "pick your own" this year due to higher cost of insurance.

The Dean's have started a new venture in order to go directly to the consumer with their produce. A farm market located outside of Bangor is called ELVERN FARM MARKET. The market opened for business January 1, 1991 and got off to a slow start. Dean accounts the slow start to the bad economy and the start of the war plus the market known as the RED WAGON located in the same place had been closed all winter in the preceding years.

The Dean's plan to offer a full variety of bedding and flower plants as well as the fruit and vegetables grown on their farm. Mrs. Dean has the responsibility of the store. When entering the store one is greeted with a very clean and attractive layout. One wall is covered with newspaper articles about the Dean's and their involvement with the farm tour, cider mill, and county fairs in the area. The desk located in a corner of the store was used as a work place for Mrs. Dean's Pysanka Eggs that she works on around Eastertime. She is the only one in her family of Polish descent since her great-grandmother to know how to make the Ukrainian Eggs. She explained the process of dipping the egg in beeswax and one color at a time as quite a painstaking art.

While Mrs. Dean is busy with the store and children, she refers to gardening and taking care of the petting zoo animals as her hobbies. The petting zoo consists of piglets, lambs, miniature goats, chickens, one Tom turkey, an ostrich, and a miniature Sicilian Donkey obtained from a breeder in the state of Maryland. Mr. Dean is taking care of the farm.

He will quickly tell you he does not want to hire much help and get beyond what they can handle themselves. The summer part-time workers have been coming back for several years. One young lady refers to the Deans as her own family. He hires a crew to come in and prune the trees and to help when the harvest is in its heaviest time.

The cider press runs seven days a week about September 1 through May. The cider-making process is open for visitors to observe when they visit the farm. The apples are brought in through a chute and put into a grinder. The pulp is carried over to the press by polypropylene lines. The juice is stored in stainless-steel storage tanks and kept refrigerated. The plastic containers are filled by hand. Mr. Dean says 90% of the apple cider is sold without preservatives. During the late winter months they add preservatives to prolong shelf life because the demand for cider slows down.

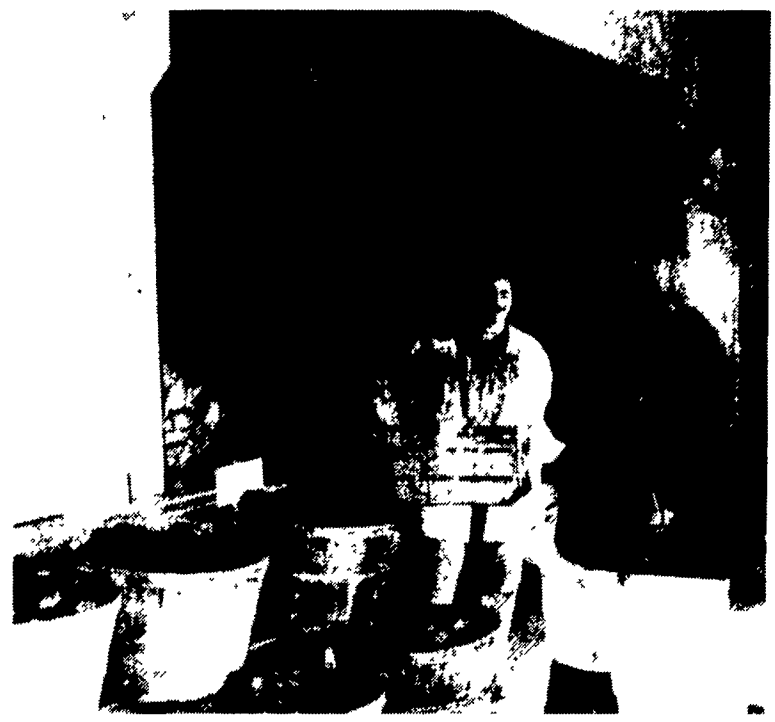
The farm bookkeeping is computerized, Dean has that job. Mrs. Dean prefers mowing lawn and outside work to working at the computer.

In his spare time, Dean accompanies a local musical group THE NEW APPROACH on the piano. He plays professionally at some of the resorts in the Pocono Mountains. He has been involved in church choirs, school activities, and other community-type program as accompanist since fourth grade.

The Dean's have two children. Their son Geoffrey is in Little League, so Dad coaches the team. Jennifer is in dance class so Dad often plays accompaniment on the piano. The pond is a very inviting place for the children in the summertime and Dad is often taking a quick dip right along with them.

Mrs. Dean recalls the first day she applied for a job picking beans on the farm. She had just graduated from high school and couldn't find a job. She was paid $2 a half bushel piece rate. The day was hot and that evening she was sunburned and very dirty. She loved it then and has ever since. She is a city girl turned country.

The well-kept pond in the background adds beauty and recreation for the Dean family.



Linda Dean manages Elvern Farm Market, Bangor. The market is operated year round by the Deans. The produce is grown on a family-owned Farm in Mt. Bethel.

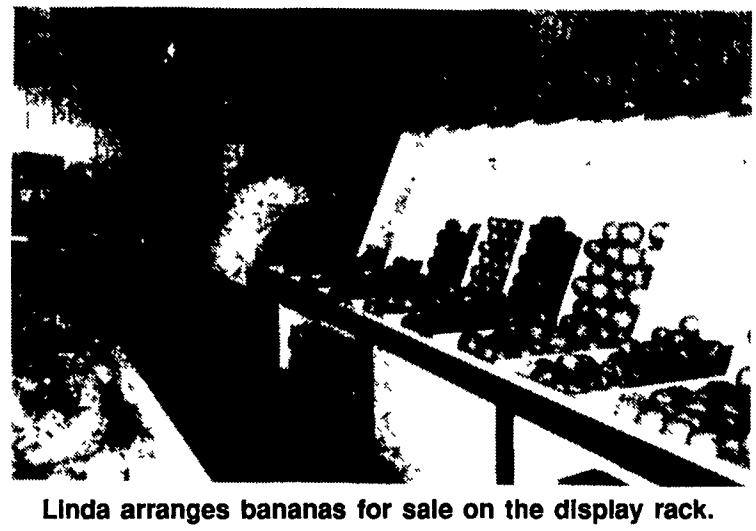
Chickens, turkey, and an ostrich share space in the petting zoo.



Linda arranges bananas for sale on the display rack.

Plant A Tree

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — There has been a lot of talk about global warming, the greenhouse effect and loss of the ozone layer. The issues have been controversial at best. But, whichever side of the fence you sit upon, there is a fact which can not be disputed . . . planting trees will enhance your environment. Members of the Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association list the following benefits of tree planting:

1. Trees have an aesthetic value. The mere presence of a tree brings about feelings of pride and magnificence and help to make your home an attractive place to live.

2. Trees can save time and money when selling your home. According to the Gallup Landscaping Survey, landscaping is a factor when looking for a home. (Homeowners feel landscaping adds almost 15% to the value of the property.)

3. Trees need CO^2 to perform photosynthesis. Therefore, this CO^2 is not emitted into the earth's atmosphere where it may be causing a fluctuation in temperature.

4. Trees, properly planted, can reduce heating and cooling bills by 10 to 30 percent when properly used around the home by manipulating the sunlight and wind to your benefit.

5. Trees can serve as sound and sight barriers against excessive traffic or an unsightly building.

While global warming may be a trend, the proven facts are that trees provide beauty, sdave homeowners money, and enhance the environment.

Fast-Food Restaurants Switch To Vegetable Oils

Robert E. Leiby
David Dunbar
Lehigh Co. Cooperative Extension Office

The switch from beef tallow to vegetable oils for cooking French fries, announced last summer by three of the largest fast-food restaurant chains, should not cause major changes in the fats and oils industry — just reshuffle it a bit.

Wendy's uses 100 percent corn oil for cooking its fries since the beginning of 1991, says a spokesperson for the chain. McDonald's now uses a blend of corn oil and cottonseed oil for all of its fried products. Before last summer's switch, McDonald's French fries were cooked in a blend of beef tallow, corn oil, and cottonseed oil.

Burger King, the other major chain, switched from an animal-vegetable shortening to a soybean oil-cottonseed oil blend for its French fries. All of its other fried foods are cooked in soybean oil.

USDA's Economic Research Service (ERS) estimates that the switch to vegetable oils by the fast-food chains will realign the demand for the cooking oils by about 250 million pounds. The demand for corn oil will shift by about 150 million pounds, and cottonseed and soybean oil by 50 million pounds each. The abundant supply of soy oil should accommodate the fats and oils customers squeezed out of the corn oil supply by the fast-food chains, says ERS economist James Schaub.

The loser, edible beef tallow, can be converted to inedible industrial uses. In addition, exports of tailow nave increased.

The move to vegetable oils was in response to consumer concems about saturated fat in foods. Most fast-food chains were cooking their French fries primarily in beef tallow. Beef tallow gives French fries their familiar, desirable taste and costs food processors considerably less than vegetable oils -- about 14 cents per pound compared with the increased-demand cost of soybean oil, 21 to 24 cents; cottonseed oil, 22 to 25 cents; and corn oil, 24 to 27 cents per pound.

In addition to giving fried foods their familiar good taste, beef tallow is durable in fat fryers. But unfortunately, it's high in saturated fat, a current health-conscious consumer concem. Nutrition data from each of the three fast-food companies indicate that the change in frying fats reduces the saturated fat content of their French fries by about 50 percent.

Corn oil is the big winner in the changeover. What makes corn oil so attractive to the industry is that it has frying properties that work, especially when blended with cottonseed oil. And the corn-cottonseed oil blend holds its desirable cooking properties longer in the fryers.

But corn is not grown for its oil. Oil is a byproduct of corn milling, primarily for high fructose corn syrup (HFCS, a sweetener), and the manufacture of ethanol, so its supply does not respond to vegetable oil prices. The supply of corn oil depends on the demand for HFCS, and food and industrial uses for milled corn, says Schaub.

ERS forecasts slightly higher food and industrial uses of corn in 1990-91.

Cottonseed has become a less important source of oil. It used to be the dominant vegetable oil in the United States until the period of World War II. After that time, it lost its market share to soybean oil.

ERS forecasts larger supplies, stronger demand and marginally higher prices for cottonseed, its meal and its oil, for 1990-91.

Soybean oil is the most abundant of the three vegetable oils that the fast-food restaurants have switched to. Soybean oil is a joint product of soybeans which are primarily used for meal and oil. One-third of its value is oil. Schaub says that soybean oil is likely to fill the void in products that compete with the fast-food restaurants for the corn oil market. The exceptions, of course, are the products that are labeled primarily corn oil. Because the 50- million-pound increased use from fast-food restaurants is less than half a percent of total current use, ERS estimates that the price should go up less than a half-cent per pound.

Beef tallow has a two-channel market — the edible for frying fat, and the inedible for industrial uses, such as soap -- so the change in fast-food restaurant demand should not be painful.

Schaub says that adjustments in the edible tallow market will include an increase in exports and a diversion from edible to inedible uses, such as displacing a small amount of tropical oils used in soap. Exports of edible tallow have climbed steadily and are forecast to total 375 million pounds in 1990-91, from 324 million pounds in 1989-90 and 240 million in 1988-89. Because of these alternative uses, edible tallow prices probably won't fall more than one to two cents per pound.

Substituting vegetable oils for beef tallow reduces domestic use of tallow to about 650 million pounds, compared with 841 million in 1989-90. But this continues a downtrend. As recently as 1985-86, domestic use was nearly 1.6 billion pounds. McDonald's, Burger King and Wendy's accounted for about 30 percent of the edible tallow market.

FFA HAPPENINGS

Kevin Long, left, received the Star Farmer Degree at the Forbes Road FFA banquet recently. Donald Hoffman was honored with the Star Greenhand Award.

Forbes Road FFA

The Forbes Road FFA held their annual awards banquet at the Hustontown Fire Hall on April 16.

Senior Kevin Long, HCR 71 Hustontown, was awarded the Chapter Star Farmer Plaque for his contributions to the chapter. In addition to his top rank in the scholastic standing, Kevin has worked for three years on Dr. James Witt's dairy farm at Burnt Cabins.

Sophomore Donald Hoffman, HCR 73 Three Springs, received the Star Greenhand Award. Donald has the highest academic and shop average in the first year Vo-Ag class. He also works evenings and summers on the 123-acre home farm.

Randy McDaid got the cash award for the highest citrus fruit sales.

The grand door prize at the banquet was an eight foot work bench with shelves and drawers that was built by the FFA students during the shop phase of the Vo-Ag program.

Greenwood Freshmen Advance

Three Greenwood FFA ninth grade members have advanced to regional competition in public speaking contests.

Heather Benner, daughter of Glenn and Brenda Benner of RD #2 Millerstown, was the first place finisher in both the county and area junior speaking contests with her speech, entitled "Education: The Answer To Activism," according to chapter advisor MeeCee Baker.

Also Rhonda Witmer, daughter of Sid and Clair Witmer of RD #1 Liverpool, won first place in the FFA creed contests at both the county and area competition.

Placing second in both creed contests was Bridget Semrau, daughter of Fred and Leila Semrau of RD #1 Millerstown.

Rhonda and Bridget will advance to regional competition.

High School Students Speak Out About Agriculture And The Environment

American agriculture's youth are speaking out about our nation's environmental problems and how agriculture will play a role in finding solutions.

High school agriculture students from around the nation entered short essays focusing on agriculture's role in preserving the environment in the "Up With Agriculture" Writing Contest conducted by FFA "New Horizons" magazine.

National winner is Timothy Steele, 19, from Barnes, Kan., and a member of the Valley Heights FFA. He wrote:

There are many white faced barns scattered throughout the countryside. However, one owned by my uncle is very unique. Painted on the door in red is a saying: "The earth and her resources are not a gift from our ancestors, but a loan from our children."

For many years, man's goal has been to tame the environment. In the process it was unintentionally abused. It is time that the men and women in agriculture set the standards by working with nature, not against it. Yes, the earth is a gift, but it is a precious gift that must be passed on.

Steele receives $500 as national winner and an additional $50 as Kansas state winner. His local FFA advisor is Dan Palmateer.

The contest is sponsored for the magazine by Garst Seed Company as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.

National runner up was Troy Robertson, 17, from Grovespring, Mo., and a member of the Hartville FFA. Part of his essay stated, "I feel that the American farmer holds the key to open the door to a cleaner environment. I feel that by utilizing America's considerable grain supplies to produce ethanol, we the people could begin to solve this problem." His advisor is Craig Lehman.

Third place winner was Sarah Cockle, 15, from Everson, Wash., and a member of the Nooksack Valley FFA. She believes "the area that holds the most promise is the Low Input Sustainable Agriculture (LISA) movement. By using LISA principles in farming, chemicals and pesticide use could be reduced, leading to a cleaner environment." Her advisor is Fred Cockle.

Fourth place winner was David Dempster, 17, from Laurel, Mont., and a member of the Park City FFA. He wrote, "As the largest user of land in our nation, agriculturalists must exert special efforts to serve not only as owners, but as stewards of the land. We must be role models, acting as ambassadors of Earth to the public." His advisor is Tim Schaff.

They each receive $250 as national finalists and each receives an additional $50 as state winners. All of the winners will be recognized at their state FFA conventions by the national FFA officers.

Cedar Crest FFA Places 2nd

On April 4, the Lebanon County parliamentary procedure contest was held at Eastern Lebanon High School. In order to advance to the area contest, the team had to finish in the top four placings.

The parliamentary procedure contest consisted of eight members who demonstrated parliamentary procedure in an FFA meeting. The team could bring up unfinished and new business, but the meeting could not last more than 20 minutes.

The Cedar Crest team will compete in the area contest to be held at Annville United Methodist Church. The team members included Chris Long, Randy Brandt, John Risser, Danny Atkins, Jamie Eisenhour, Scott Nolt, Jason Hess, Jason Krall, and alternates Ammon Peiffer, Matt Sensenig, and Nathan Seyfert.

The judges for the contest were Dale Hoover, past state FFA president, and Ron Frederick, ag teacher from Twin Valley High School.

In addition to the parliamentary procedure contest, the prepared public speaking contest was held. This contest requires the student to prepare a six to eight minute speech related to agriculture. At the conclusion of the speech, the judges were given five minutes to question the student on their speech. Chris Long placed first and will advance to the area contest. Judges for the speaking were Lowell Morton and Gretchen Oberst.

FFA Alumni Toy Auction

The success of any auction is the final result. In this case, the FFA alumni scholarship fund was the big winner at the second annual Toy Auction held at the New York Farm show.

Thanks to the numerous generous contributions, a total of 300 toys were auctioned. There was standing-room only as eager bidders waited for the right toy tractor, farm implement, or truck to be auctioned by auctioneer Steve Wright of Sidekick Auction in Trumensburg.

Bidding was fast and furious, but in the end it was the FFA Alumni Scholarship fund who were the winners. A total of $1,700 was collected to help the fund.

"I'm real pleased of the success of this auction," said Scott Grigor, New York Farm Show manager and coordinator for the event. "Next year we might have to find a bigger place to hold the auction!"

The FFA Alumni Scholarship fund provides funds for leadership, training, scholarships, State FFA Convention speakers, awards, and workshop expenses. Local chapters throughout the state will benefit from the auction.

Farm Toy Show Set

The Upper Dauphin Area Adult Farmers and the Upper Dauphin Area FFA are sponsoring the second annual Upper Dauphin Area Farm Toy Show and Auction.

The event will be held at the Upper Dauphin Area High School, Elizabethville, on May 4 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The auction begins at 4 p.m.

Approximately 60 exhibitors from five states are expected to attend this year's show. The event focuses exclusively on farm toys and trucks.

The collection of these types of toys is one of the fastest growing hobbies in this area and across the nation. Items that were once considered little boys' toys may now be valued collectors' pieces. Shows and sales such as the one to be held at Upper Dauphin Area High School give toy enthusiasts the opportunity to meet friends with similar interests as well as the chance to add to their collections.

For more information, contact Stanley Weaver at (717) 362-8181 or Terry Mauser at (717) 362-3575.

Cedar Crest FFA

Recently, the State FFA Project Book Contest was held at University Park, Pennsylvania.

More than 700 of the best project books from Pennsylvania were entered.

Cedar Crest members won several awards. The winners were Nathan Seyfert- 1st, gold, On-Farm 800-1,500 hrs.; Andy III- 2nd, gold, On-Farm 800-1,500 hrs.; Christopher Long- 2nd, gold, On-Farm under 400 hrs.; John Risser- 3rd, gold, Dairy Heifers; Jamie Eisenhour- 2nd, Silver, Practicum Skills and Mike Keller- 2nd, silver, On-Farm 600-800 hrs.

Cowanesque FFA Holds Banquet

The annual parent-member banquet of the Cowanesque FFA Chapter was attended by 135 people. David Good, chapter president, served as the master of ceremonies.

Dr. Don Evans, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture, Pa. State University, was the guest speaker. Evans stressed the need for all to think more global in all aspects of life and of agriculture in particular. "These are dynamic and challenging times," he said. "And education is the key to allowing kids to cope, both with the outside world and with their peers."

Evans introduced Mr. Tomasc Adamczyk, a Polish visitor to our country and to Pennsylvania. Adamczyk mentioned a little of what life has been like in Poland and other block countries in the past and how they are trying to handle their newfound freedom. He said, "This generation is paying a high price for these changes. We want a new movement to prepare kids for a united Europe."

Chapter proficiencies were presented to 28 members. Creed speaking awards went to Laurie Wildman and Colin Graves, with public speaking awards going to Susan Groover and Stacey Graves. David Good received the chapter leadership medal, with the chapter scholarship award going to Angie Miles.

State proficiency plaques were presented to Ruth Bicher for horse production and the diversified livestock award went to Nikki Griffin, who was also recognized as being the state outstanding FFA female in livestock production.

State record book awards went to Dawn Patterson, silver in dairy calves; Stacey Graves, bronze in swine finishing; and a bronze to David Good for alfalfa production. Dawn also received the county award from Northeast Farm Credit, presented by the Wellsboro loan officer, Bonnie Keil.

State judging awards were presented to Stacey Graves, silver and Susan Groover, a bronze for dairy foods; silver awards to Rob Gilman and Bradley Painter for dairy judging; and the livestock judging gold went to Rhick Johnson, with Bart Ianson getting a silver.

The Star Awards for 1991 went to Laurie Wildman, Greenhand; Bart Ianson, Chapter; and Susan Groover, Agribusiness.

REAL ESTATE

401+ Acres of very desirable land in one tremendous tract. But this is a great parcel of land which, when you see it, will speak for itself. The new owners can redo the improvements to their own liking. The land is the main consideration with 401+ acres in one package.

The unique topography of this southern York County land gives beautiful vistas in several directions, one of which overlooks the Susquehanna River, which forms the eastern boundary of the farm. The Mason-Dixon Line forms the southern boundary, and Cooper Road forms approx. ¾ mi. of the western boundary. If you are in the market for a crop or cattle farm, wish to create a showplace, or desire a rural refuge surrounded by the white tail deer which abound, attend Open House and consider this farm.

CONTROL OF POULTRY PATHOGENS DURING PROCESSING

Carol Clouser

Department of Food Science

In the quest to reduce or eliminate pathogens from fresh poultry and meat products, scientists agree that the presence of microorganisms on such items is unavoidable.

General conclusions are:

- The number of microorganisms found on poultry and other meat products vary from processor to processor.
- Different methods used to detect specific pathogens, such as Salmonella, can produce very different results.
- Most pathogen work can only give qualitative (presence or absence), rather than quantitative (how many bacteria) results.
- Each poultry and meat species tends to have specific types of bacteria that are more prevalent than others.
- If not properly refrigerated, all poultry and meat will support microbial growth. The best way to control the levels of microorganisms during processing is to minimize the initial number of organisms entering the processing plant.

Decreasing the number of organisms present on incoming flocks will aid in reducing the chances of cross-contamination occurring during the first stages of processing.

Current research has indicated that the effects of cross-contamination throughout processing and subsequent growth of organisms remaining on the carcass following processing can be further minimized or even reduced through the modification and consistent proper use of existing processing equipment. Additionally, education of all persons involved in the hatching, raising, transport, processing, distribution, and consumption of poultry products is necessary to assure the highest quality product possible.

Spray-rinsing the carcasses with weak solutions of organic acids or chlorinated water, the proper use of counterflow chillers, and good sanitation practices have shown promise in reducing numbers of microorganisms and the rate of cross-contamination.

Minimizing further growth of bacteria remaining on the surface of poultry can be accomplished through proper temperature control in packaging and storage areas.

The beef industry has recently received approval to use organic acid rinses. The most promising to date is a 2 percent lactic acid rinse. Some work on poultry has been accomplished using organic acids, but approved procedures are, as yet, not available.

Research conducted in this area demonstrated that inside/outside bird washers in use in the industry are an effective means of applying these sprays. Organic acid sprays should be applied before chilling to reduce the number of bacteria entering the chiller and to allow the acid to be rinsed off before packaging.

Spraying chlorinated water on equipment that is in constant contact with carcasses can also help in minimizing bird-to-bird cross-contamination. Contact points, which are either visual or microbiological sources of cross-contamination, should be continuously rinsed during operation to ensure that equipment is not further contributing to any cross-contamination problem.

Most new water chillers are of a counterflow design. This means that the cleanest water in the chill tanks should be where the product is leaving the system. When properly operated, counterflow chillers can actually help to improve the microbiological profile of the carcasses. However, in order to be effective, the chillers must be properly and continuously chlorinated. Birds should also be rinsed thoroughly before entering the chill system because the accumulation of organic matter within the chill system can affect the ability of the chlorine to reduce or control microorganisms.

Proper employee sanitation and handling practices can also reduce cross-contamination at the processing level. In packaging rooms, especially, proper handling practices and temperature control will help to minimize further contamination and control microbial growth on the products in the room and on contact surfaces. Once the packages are cased, temperature control and proper inventory rotation are essential to providing microbial protection.

At the distribution stage, most processors lose the ability to control the destiny of their products. At this point, the distributor, retailer, and consumer must be relied on to use the educational materials, toll-free numbers, and handling guidelines printed on packages to help assure the safety and quality of this perishable food product.

Wool Support Payments

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) recently issued payments in the amount of $10,454 to wool producers in Lancaster County, said Ray Brubaker, county executive director. These price support payments are for the 1990 marketing of shorn wool.

The 1990 support price for shorn wool is $1.82 per pound, determined by the National Wool Act of 1958 as amended. The 1990 national average market price for shorn wool, $.80 per pound, was $1.02 less than the support price.

Brubaker said that the 1990 shorn wool payment rate of 127.,5 percent is the percentage which brings the average price received by all producers up to the support price. The payment rate will be applied to the net proceeds received by producers for shorn wool marketed during the marketing year.

The Wool Act provides that pulled wool shall be supported at a level comparable to the shorn wool support rate in order to maintain normal pulled wool marketing practices. Accordingly, producers will receive $4.08 per hundredweight in price support payments for unshorn lambs that were sold or slaughtered during the 1990 marketing year.

Wool producers in the country are expected to receive about $105 million in price support payments on shorn and pulled wool. Mohair producers will receive about $60 million.

Planting Rate Determines Yield

DEKALB, Ill. — Ensuring the optimum number of corn plants per acre is one key to harvesting maximum yields. So figuring the correct planting rates is essential, said DEKALB Plant Genetics regional agronomist Rick Mason.

Growers should consider several factors when figuring their planting populations goals.

"Most planting rate suggestions assume that average high management levels are going to be practiced," he said. "So if your managemnent is not at a high level, perhaps the planting rate should be reduced somewhat to avoid over population."

Planting rate should exceed final targeted population because some seeds fail to germinate and other seedlings never mature, Mason said. He suggests planting 15 percent over the targeted population, assuming normal conditions for germination and plant growth.

Soil moisture at planting is another factor to consider when selecting seeding rates.

"In non-irrigated areas of the western Corn Belt, below-normal moisture justifies reducing planting rate somewhat while above-normal supply indicates above-normal planting rate," said Mason. "In the central and eastern Corn Belt, where seasonal rainfall tends to approach adequacy for maximum corn performance, growers need not cut planting rate if it is dry at planting time.

In four of five years, result. from DEKALB's on-farm field analysis comparison trials (FACT) plots showed highest yields occurred with planting rates of 31-35 thousand seeds per acre. Mason reminds growers that irrigated and non-irrigated corn both respond favorably to the highest population levels.

Eberlys Become Junior Members

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Allison and Shawn Eberly of Stevens, Pa., recently became junior members of the American Polled Hereford Association, according to an announcement from the beef breed's headquarters.

Junior memberships have been given to thousands of youth in every state in the nation by the association, entitling them to reduced fees and certain privileges the same as adult members.

The American Polled Hereford Association is the national promotion and registration organization for Polled Herefords, one of the leading breeds of beef cattle in the world.

Polled Herefords are naturally hornless and are the first major breed to originate in the U.S., starting with 11 animals in 1901. More than four million Polled Herefords have been registered since that beginning. The breed is noted primarily for its economic traits of maternal efficiency, fertility, gentle temperament, calving ease, and adaptability.

Learn To Manage Root Rot

DEKALB, Ill. — Soybean farmers face a variety of diseases that can reduce yields. But phytophthora root rot (PRR) has become perhaps the most damaging of all soybean diseases.

Though found more often in Illinois and areas east, it can occur anywhere excessive moisture becomes a problem. Yet growers can manage this disease effectively.

PRR can invade the roots of both seedlings and more mature plants, said Herb Brown, regional agronomist for DEKALB Plant Genetics. Though most severe in low, poorly drained soils, it can be especially damaging to suceptible soybean varieties grown in PRR-infested soils that are saturated beyond capacity.

"Since free water is required for infection, farmers can reduce the potential for PRR by reducing soil compaction, improving soil drainage, and adopting tillage methods and crop rotations that minimize destruction of soil structure," Brown said.

Despite these efforts, certain fields and segments of the U.S. soybean production area will still have problems with PRR. But farmers can utilize chemical and genetic resistance to minimize the yield-robbing effects of PRR, said Brown.

He said growers can apply metalaxyl to the seed or to the soil at planting time. It typically is used when farmers plant a susceptible variety in fields where PRR has been a frequent problem. Protection will vary from seedling stage to full-season maturity, depending on the amount and method of chemical usage.

Another option is planting PRR-resistant soybean varieties. Soybean breeders have been very successful in developing varieties that contain one or more genes that impart PRR resistance without sacrificing the very important characteristics of high-yield potential, standability, shatter resistance and quick, strong emergence, the DEKALB agronomist said.

"When farmers utilize PRR-resistant soybean varieties, they are reducing the risks associated with growing soybeans in PRR-prone soils," Brown said. "This will become increasingly important as farmers adopt some of the soil-saving practices required by conservation legislation."

For example, the heavy residue asociated with no-till planting can result in cooler, wetter soils that more easily produce conditions favorable to PRR infection. Man-made, soil-saving structures that restrict water runoff tend to concentrate water in low areas, increasing the liklihood of waterlogged soil which promote PRR infection, he said.

"Farmers cannot control the occurrence of PRR, but hose who use sound management techniques and plant soybean varieties with PRR resistance have a much better chance of preventing serious yield losses," Brown said.

Bison (Yes, Bison!) Arrive In Pa.

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — Bison are here! Yes, here in Pennsylvania.

In the spring, bison (buffalo) also have their calves. Bison are already on about 50 Pennsylvania farms.

They are small numbers, so far. But, according to the Pennsylvania Bison (Buffalo) Association, more bison meat (which is very high in protein and low in calories and cholesterol) will be available to more Pennsylvania people.

The association is giving a management seminar in New Castle, Pa. on Saturday, May 11. The seminar will be hosted by Hugh and Joann Forbes at the Country Corner Hall across from Forbes Buffalo Inn, on the corner of routes 388 and 108. The cost (which includes coffee break and lunch) will be $15 for association members and $20 for nonmembers. For reservations, call Margery Kutney (717) 965-2237 before May 8.

Do You Know How To Combat The Wrath Of Grapes?

From New Hampshire to Florida and westward to Kansas, wild grapes can be found all through the Appalachian hardwoods.

To the wildlife biologist, the birdlover, and the hunter, the fruit of the grapevines provide food and cover for a great variety of wild creatures. On the other side of the coin, to a forester and a timber grower, the vines can cause serious damage or even kill standing trees.

There have been studies conducted since the 1930s researching wild grapes' effects on trees and how to control them. Trees in stands with heavy concentrations of grapevine grow slower, have smaller crowns, and suffer a higher mortality rate than trees without grapevines. Vines generally damage trees in four ways: 1) break the tops and limbs, 2) twist and bend the main stem, 3) submerge the tree foliage in large masses of grape leaves, which interferes with the trees photosynthesis, and 4) contribute to ice, snow, and wind damage by adding extra weight to the tree.

Here are some general facts about grapevines. Wild grapes reproduce naturally by seed or by sprouting from an existing stump or vine. These seeds can remain dormant for as long as eight years before germinating. Sprouting from the roots or stem tends to be very profuse and these sprouts grow very fast because they already have an established root and feeding system. Some sprouts have a measured growth of 15 feet or more in one growing season. But grape seedlings grow very slowly at first since they have to develop a new root system for themselves.

The vines climb by means of tendrils which they use to secure themselves to stems and twigs of vegetation within their reach. Observations are that they usually grow up with the tree. This suggests that the grapevine in the crown of an 80-year-old tree is also apt to be 80 years old.

Records from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service indicate that at least 80 species of birds and a large number of animals eat grapes. The grape plant supplies both food and cover for wildlife. Ripe grapes can be found on the vines from mid-August through mid-March. The peak abundance of fallen grapes available for game is usually at the beginning of November. The number of grape bunches on a vine is directly proportional to the vine's diameter. Larger vines produce more grapes.

Grapevines often grow profusely at the edges of forest stands and in small forest openings. If the trees are young enough and short enough, the vines work their way into the tops of the younger trees and then into the taller trees near them. They spread from tree top to tree top, deeper into the forest. This causes injuries to the stems and branches of younger trees.

The most serious injury from grapevines is the deformation and shading of tree crowns. As a tree reaches its maturity and slows its height growth, the grapevine that has been growing along with it continues to grow and spreads out over the tree tops. The leaves from the vine shut off the sunlight to the tree's leaves below. The tree is then unable to synthesize food with the low amount of sunlight so its growth slows to a very minimal rate. With added stresses on the tree like drought, gypsy moth, or a disease, it is more than the tree can handle and it perishes.

Effectively controlling grapevines in certain stand conditions is accomplished by severing the vines at ground level. This type of control has two advantages: it does not involve chemicals and thus escapes some criticism, and it is inexpensive. The disadvantage is that it is not effective under all conditions. Under the shade of a well-stocked forest where the trees are taller than 25 feet, the sprouts from the cut grape stumps will not be able to develop and regrow into the tree tops.

Grapevines are very intolerant of shaded condition. They must have a great deal of light to grow. Under the shade of a dense forest canopy, a vine will die in 2 to 3 years after being cut.

Severing the vines works as a control measure when it is done under a forest canopy that does not have big holes in it. If a selection cut or improvement cut is planned in a stand to open up holes in the canopy so the remaining trees will have room to grow, the vines should be cut several years before the trees are cut.

An attempt should be made to cut all vines in all trees, not just crop trees. The reason is that the grapevines will travel from one tree crown to another and infect the entire canopy over time. When a harvest is planned in an old stand of trees that are approaching maturity and a clearcut is recommended, grapevines should be cut at least 4 years before the harvest. The objective is to eliminate all vines so that their sprouts will not damage the new trees that emerge after the clearcut.

These are just some control recommendations. Some work is being done with herbicides, but more need to be developed that do not favor grapes. In young stands heavily infected with grapevines, a foliar application herbicide will kill all vegetation, but since the grape seeds remain viable for years in the soil, killing the other vegetation will enhance new seedling growth. More research is needed to find a better control for the grapevine in all situations.

Forest Facts

For the average hardwood tree cut down to make lumber, half the total wood volume is left in the woods as tops, limbs, and logging residue; about a quarter is lost as sawdust, slabs, and edgings in the sawmill; another eighth disappears as shavings and machining residues, leaving about one eighth of the original volume that is sold as timber.

• Of the approximately 600 U.S. mills producing pulp, paper, paperboard, or building products, 200 depend almost entirely on wastepaper for their raw material. Another 300 use 10-50 percent wastepaper in their manufacturing process.

Wood Number One In Energy Efficiency

A study by the Society of Wood Science and Technology show that wood is one of the most environmentally acceptable building materials available today.

When the total energy costs (including those of harvesting, transportation, processing, and construction) are compared, wood far surpasses its competitors. For example, it takes six to eight times more energy to make a wall of brick veneer over sheathing than to make an all-wood wall.

Since raw material used to produce substitute construction materials are mostly imported, the environmental impact is actually higher. University of Minnesota researcher Jim Bower says, "When we import these materials, we are in effect exporting our pollution problems to other countries."

In recent Nebraska tractor tests, Zetor 4-wheel drive tractors placed first and second in drawbar fuel economy for 40 to 60 HP tractors. Zetor's Model 5245 tested out at 13.83 horsepower hours per gallon. The average for the 19 tractors tested was 13.12, which is 47 horsepower minutes per gallon less than Zetor's Model 7245.

Zetor Tractors Place High In Tests

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— In recent Nebraska tractor tests, Zetor 4-wheel drive tractors placed first and second in drawbar fuel economy for 40 to 60 HP tractors.

During the tests which were conducted at the University of Nebraska, fuel economy was measured in horsepower hours per gallon of fuel over a 10-hour cycle. The tractors were operated under a 75% load level.

Zetor's Model 5245 tested out at 13.83 horsepower hours per gallon. The average for the 19 tractors tested was 13.12, which is 47 horsepower minutes per gallon less than Zetor's Model 7245.

According to Josef Blecha, executive vice president of American Jawa Ltd., Zetor's parent company, fuel efficiency is not a new feature for the Czechoslovakian-made tractors.

"Zetor's engineering has always been advanced," he said. "For almost 50 years, our tractors have had a reputation for fuel efficiency in over 90 countries around the world. They are tractors designed to stay in the field in countries where fuel is scarce and more expensive than it is here."

Zetor tractors and farm machinery are sold throughout the United States. For the name and address of your nearest dealer, call Zetor's General Sales Manager, Marvin Brown, at (717) 540-5618.

Conditioner Works 8-10 Acres Per Hour

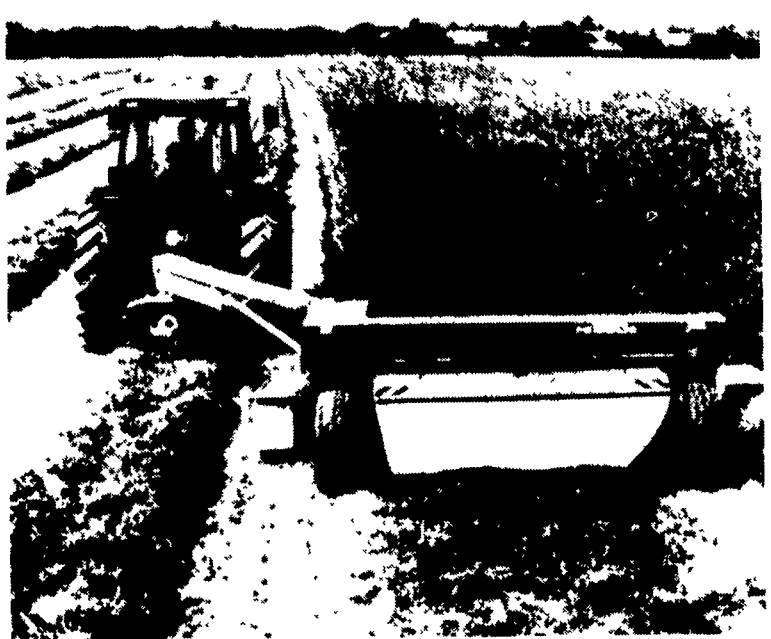
VERNON, N.Y. — Kuhn Farm Machinery, a manufacturer of high-output agricultural equipment, is introducing a new mower-conditioner capable of working 8 to 10 acres in one hour.

Kuhn's FC350 offers a cutting width of 11 foot 6 inches and a conditioning width of 8 foot 10 inches. This machine conditions the crop as it mows to cut crop drying time by up to 50 percent.

Utilizing a free swinging finger and adjustable comb conditioning mechanism geared specifically toward thin stem grass crops, the FC 350 opens the natual wax coating along the length of the crop stem, allowing maximum moisture content to evaporate. Conditioning intensity is determined by the degree of overlap between the comb teeth and the centrifugal-force activated rotor fingers.

This type of conditioning ensures excellent crop quality and higher nutritive value. If conventional mowing is required, the conditioning unit can be removed and a special guard fitted in its place.

The FC350, a towed model, requires 90 HP for operation and travels at a speed of 7-9 mph. It works equally well on flat or contoured surfaces without compromising cutting and conditioning quality because of adjustable heavy-duty suspension springs.



Kuhn's FC350 mower-conditioner offers a cutting width of 11 feet 6 inches and a conditioning width of 8 feet 10 inches. this machine conditions the crop as it mows to cut crop drying time by up to 50 percent.

The FC350 achieves its maximum output and efficiency with seven cutting discs, each with two blades, and yields a fluffy, well-structured swath that is adjustable from 3 feet 7 inches to 7 feet 2 inches in width. For protection against damage, the FC350 mower-conditioner features a safety breakback mechanism and tows in line with the tractor for trouble-free transport.

Smith Farms Hosts Field Day

NEWPORT (Perry Co.)— A manure management field day was held recently on the M.W. Smith Farms.

The purpose of the day's activities was to demonstrate the latest equipment and technologies in manure storage, pumping, and spreading equipment and bedding materials.

More than 60 farmers and agency representatives participated. The events were planned and coordinated by the Smith's, the Perry County Soil Conservation District, and Perry County Cooperative Extension.

The following sales and service farms demonstrated equipment: McMillen Brothers, Loysville, Bodco manure pump, Badger tanker and Wic bedding chopper; Zug Farm Equipment, Mifflintown, Houle manure pump, Patz tanker and a bedding chopper; Smith Equipment, Newport, Goosen bedding chopper; Walnut Dairy & Barn Equipment, Port Royal, J-star manure pump and Dynavent bedding chopper. In addition, Lawrence Cauffman, Blain, demonstrated his truck mounted tanker.

The meeting also showcased the Smith's 12-foot deep circular poured concrete manure storage. Constructed by Groffdale Concrete, the storage is designed for 6-month storage and holds more than 400,000 gallons.

Representatives of McMillen Bros., Loysville, operate a Bedco pump to fill a Badger tanker during field day activities.

BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best -
In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed The best method is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas This is resurfacing!!!
2. BEST NEW START ON RESURFACED WOOD SIDING After spraying on this kind of barn paint or stain, take time to pay attention to brush out in all directions to create a film thickness that will prevent future peeling & resurfacing costs & effort This film will let excess moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10-15 years Southern exposures usually wear faster

DuPont Searches For Classic Tractors

WILMINGTON, Del. — The search is on again for beautifully-restored antique tractors in mint condition, suitable for the 1992 Classic Tractors Calendar being planned by Du Pont Agricultural Products, which markets "Classic" herbicide for soybeans.

This will be the third such calendar produced by Du Pont, as vintage tractor calendars were created in both 1990 and 1991.

"The Classic Tractors Calendar has been a sensational success and has generated interest not only in the U.S., but worldwide," said Ran Langille, Du Pont market manager for soybean herbicides.

Each calendar features 14 farm tractors meticulously restored to original condition by collectors, most of them farmers.

"Actually, when restorations are completed, the tractors today probably look better and brighter than the day they rolled out of the factory, because today's paints and finishes are considerably improved," Langille said.

To date, the 28 tractors to grace the 1990 and 1991 calendars represent 14 various makes, from 12 different states.

Tractors featured so far are Hart-Parr, Ford-Ferguson, Fordson, John Deere (5), McCormick-Deering Farmall (4), Caterpillar, Minneapolis-Moline (2), Case (2), Oliver (2), Massey-Harris (3), Allis-Chalmers (2), Silver King, Heider, Twin City, and Moline Universal.

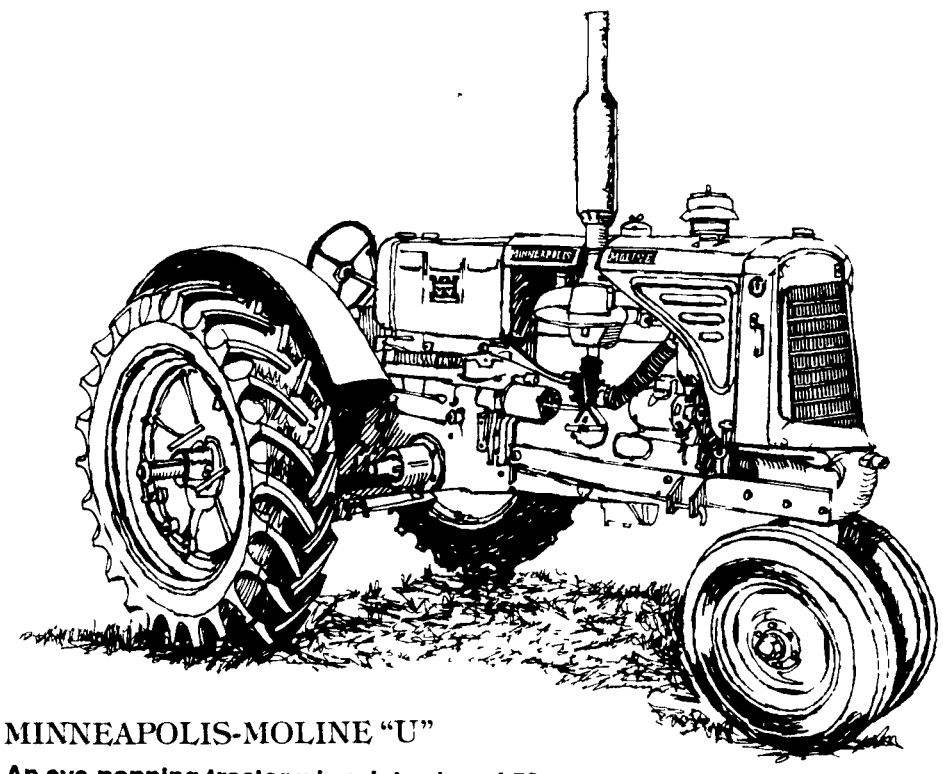
Tractors have been chosen from Alabama, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Tennessee.

"We plan to add an antique tractor from Canada next year, as our neighbors to the north are equally interested in the preservation and restoration of farm tractors," said John Harvey, Du Pont communications manager, who directs the project.

"Inquiries about the Classic Tractors Calendar have come from all over England, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other countries as well," Harvey said.

Again this year, the large, colorful calendar will be printed with soybean oil ink. A professional videotape featuring the owners and their tractors, and a large wall poster picturing all 14 tractors are planned again for 1992.

To qualify as an official candidate for Du Pont's Classic Tractors Calendar, the tractor must be 50 years old or older, and in showroom- ready condition. Owners should submit a color snapshot of tractor with information to John Harvey, Classic Tractors, Du Pont Company, Walker's Mill 5-170, Wilmington, DE 19880-0038.



MINNEAPOLIS-MOLINE "U"

An eye-popping tractor when introduced 52 years ago, the Minneapolis-Moline U, nicknamed "Red Nose" because of its red grille, is one model being considered for the 1992 Classic Tractors Calendar, produced by Du Pont Agricultural Products. The handsome 1939 Minneapolis-Moline U was a deep yellow color ("Prairie Gold") with red wheels, and featured a tapered gas tank that narrowed at the back so the tractor driver could see the rows easier while cultivating. A total of 14 vintage tractors, each in mint condition and each 50 years old or older, will grace next year's calendar. Candidates for the calendar are being selected now.

Orient Becomes Life Member Of Vegetable Association

NORTHUMBERLAND (Northumberland Co.) — Louis Orient, a well-know Westmoreland County vegetable farmer, was named a life member of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA).

The association's board of directors recognized Orient's long-standing record of service and dedication to the association and Pennsylvania's vegetable industry at the 1991 Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference in Hershey, Pa.

Life membership is the highest honor given by the PVGA. There are six other life members of the association: William Baronner and Amos Funk, both long-time directors and former presidents of the association; Ernest Bergman, Robert Fletcher, and Cyril Smith, all retired Penn State vegetable professors; and Norman Reber, retired editor of "Pennsylvania Farmer" magazine.

In 1928, while attending the Pennsylvania Farm Show, Orient and his brother stopped to rest their feet at a vegetable meeting and before they left they had become members of PVGA.

Orient served on the board of directors for about 40 years, retiring in 1981. He was president of the association in the early 1940s for a two-year term. PVGA at that time had approximately 2,000 members.

Orient began his vegetable farming with his father and brothers in Allegheny Co. In 1926, he began to attend the farmers' market on the Monongahela Wharf in Pittsburgh. In 1940, the directors of the Wharf Market incorporated under the name "Allegheny County Fruit & Vegetable Growers' Association," and Orient was president of this group from 1943 to 1985. He saw the group move from the Wharf to north side Pittsburgh, to Heidelberg, to their present location on Rt. 50 outside Bridgeville, Pa.

In 1963, he moved his farm operation to 100 acres in Westmoreland Co. He and his wife still raise 40 acres of vegetables, which he markets at the produce yards in Pittsburgh and the Farmers' Market near Bridgeville.

Louis Orient, right, of New Alexandria, Westmoreland Co., is presented with a life membership in the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association by President Glenn Hetherington.

Pa. Farmers Protect Fragile Soils

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania farmers are protecting a significant amount of highly erodible cropland from erosion, said Richard N. Duncan, state conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service (SCS).

Highly erodible soils have the potential to erode at eight times the rate at which they can naturally replenish themselves and retain productivity.

By protecting their fragile cropland soils, Pennsylvania farmers are improving water quality, preserving their soils' productivity, and ultimately their farm profits, he said.

The Food Security Act, commonly known as the 1985 Farm Bill, requires farmers to protect this type of cropland to remain eligible for most U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) farm program benefits. The conservation compliance provision of this law required farmers to get a conservation plan by January 1, 1990 and carry it out by January 1, 1995.

SCS is one of several USDA agencies responsible for helping farmers meet this requirement. SCS soil conservationists and technicians help the farmer develop the plan, which lists the conservation practices the farmer will apply to protect his or her soils.

Employees provide technical assistance to help the farmer apply these practices to his or her land. Practices used include terraces, conservation tillage, waterways, diversions, and stripcropping. These practices reduce soil erosion and improve water quality.

SCS employees identified 2 million acres of highly erodible cropland between 1986 and December 31, 1990 that needed plans, Duncan said. So far, conservation practices have been applied completely on 474,280 of these acres, or 20 percent of the total acreage, he added.

"We will exceed our goal," Duncan said. "We wanted to finish 20 percent of our compliance plan workload by September 30, the end of this fiscal year."

Duncan said SCS field employees will work diligently to ensure the agency helps farmers meet the December 31, 1994 deadline. "If farmers have questions or concerns about their plan, they should contact their local SCS office as soon as possible," he said.

SCS will carry out status reviews on 5 percent of conservation plans annually to determine whether farmers are applying their plans on schedule. Farmers who fail to do so could lose federal farm program benefits for that year. Benefits include commodity payments, crop insurance, Farmers Home Administration loans, Conservation Reserve Program payment, and disaster assistance loan payments.

Duncan is urging farmers to begin implementing their plans early. "Don't wait until the last minute," he warns. "Our employees have very heavy workloads. They will be very busy during the next four years."

Plow Day Features Old-Time Favorites

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.) — The Green John Deere "bug," said Richard Steppe, got him and his brothers on a day in April two years ago.

It was then that, along with his brother Jim, the two went looking for an old John Deere tractor. "But we didn't get it," said Richard.

But on the way home, the brothers saw "a couple of old plows like we plowed with when we were kids," he said, and from then on, nothing was the same.

After the Steppes found the plows' owner, they purchased the equipment and got it loaded onto the truck and headed home. It all happened late at night — the brothers didn't get home till two in the morning and had to be up at 4:30.

But, said Richard, the brothers wanted more than the past videotape on the old tractors. They wanted more "sound effects," and got together at Pleasant Hill Farms, owned by Jim. The brothers set the tractors and plows in motion, and made a videotape of their own event.

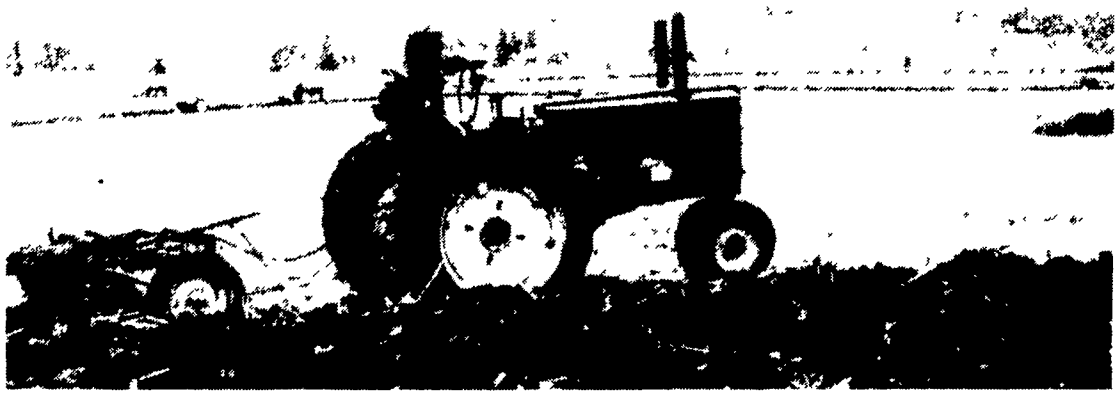
Steppe said it was great to hear and see the "old Johnny Poppers on the tape" they made, and then asked his relatives to join the fun.

So they did.

The Steppes recently hosted the annual spring "Rich-Will-Dairy-Farms" Plow Day in Williamsport. At the event were 20 tractors — "all Popper's best," said Richard, and a small antique tractor show with seven restored John Deeres and one Farmall.

The show consisted of the John Deere 330, 430, 530, 630, 730, a A and G series, and the Farmall F-12.

"It's a day of fun and play for the young and old plow boys, and when we are finished we like to gather for coffee and cookies," said Richard, "and most of all, to talk about our different tractors."



Jim Woal of Jersey Shore, Pa. takes an old John Deere tractor through the paces as driver and plowmaster at the recent Rich-Will-Dairy Farms Plow Day.

PLY-FOIL is a very efficient form of insulation. In application after application it has proven to be extremely effective at controlling heat gain/loss, thus significantly reducing heating and cooling costs. PLY-FOIL Insulation uses an aluminum foil to reflect up to 97% of the radiant heat.

PLY-FOIL BENEFITS
PLY-FOIL products are clean, lightweight, and non-toxic; are unaffected by changes in humidity; do not shrink; and once installed require no maintenance. They do not promote the growth of fungi or bacteria, and provide no nesting support for rodent or insect pests. PLY-FOIL, which has a Class A/Class 1 fire rating, meets the fire and smoke safety requirements of most federal, state and local building codes.

ADAM SELLERS YORK CO GRAND CHAMPION

SHORT NOTICE!!

We will be including (5) outstanding registered spring Duroc gilts as part of our sale offering.

We've carefully selected the five most exciting prospects from (3) different Feb. & March litters. Normally gilts of this quality & potential would be retained here for summer & winter shows. It'll be hard to find them for sale this time of year anywhere!

Farrowed by strong, genetically rich group of females, including an outstanding Stoney Ridge "Sangro" daughter; a superb "Strongbox" daughter, a 1st place class winner at "1990 Duroc Congress" in Indiana; and a line-bred "Reo" sow who has 40 pigs born in 3 litters.

Sired by "Move-Over", a littermate to the $2400. Record selling "1991 Pa. Farm Show" Reserve Champion Bred Gilt, a son of "Strongbox" and a full brother to S.G.I's popular $6000 "Movin-On" Stud Boar.

Sired by "Bruno", sire of "1991 Pa. Farm Show" Grand & Reserve Champion Duroc Barroes, sire of this springs "Pa. State Show & Sale" Grand Champion & High Selling Duroc Open Gilt, a son of Holloway's "HP12-2" boar who in his own right was a super-star show pig & carcass sire, his list goes on & on & on.

We think you'll agree that these gals will make extremely good junior show or breeding projects, as well as productive additions to your already established herd.

Wet brewers grain is more than a good feed. It's a good business ingredient.

Each day, up to 100,000 U.S. dairy cows feed on rations containing wet brewers grain. That's because their owners know it minimizes feed costs while it maximizes production.

Wet brewers grain is a high-protein feed ingredient. It's always fresh, because it's delivered directly to your dairy. It fits into most programs, is easy to handle, and easy to store.

Pillsbury

Call us today. One of our professional feed consultants will help you work wet brewers grain into your ration, so you can make it a profitable ingredient for your business.

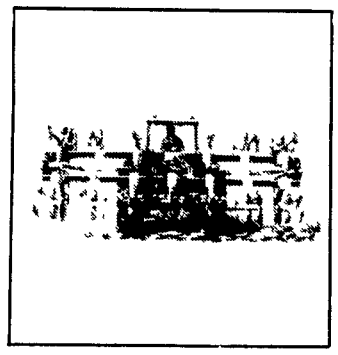
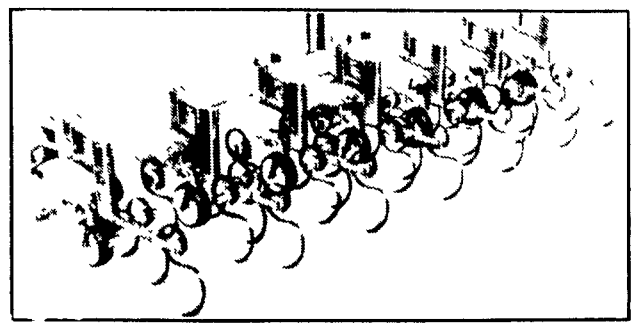
ROLLING ON...IN THE 90's Brillion MEETS THE CHALLENGE

For Built in Strength Where It Counts — Buy Brillion



NOT JUST ANOTHER CULTIVATOR

This hefty BRILLION "Ro-Crop" Cultivator has extra weight that other units don't have. Digs down...and stays down. Destorys deep-rooted weeds; doesn't dodge them. Four, six, eight and 12-row models, 30" and 40" row spacing. Non-twisting, high clearance shanks with 20" working space between gang frame and ground. Easily adjustable gauge wheels. Three point hitch. Rigid or folding toolbars. Transport kits.



Ro-Crop Cultivator with the Exclusive "No Wobble" Parallel Links

One of the weaknesses of many cultivators is that the parallel linkage is lightweight and bearing areas are small. All too soon the assembly starts to wear and break down. BRILLION'S NO WOBBLE links are made of cast iron (12 lbs. each). Each end is equipped with full 2" wide non-lube sleeve bearings.
The BRILLION "S" tine cultivator (model BRS) four-way tooth movement is designed for high speed cultivation, especially in conjunction with chemical weed control. The "S" tines also mulch the soil and level the ground for easier harvesting. Available in rigid and folding models for four to 12 rows.

CULTIVATION ADDS 5 BUSHELS

Cultivating corn, even when weeds were not a problem, increased yields an average of 5 bushels per acre over two years at a research station near Monmouth in western Illinois.

Cultivation was used with three different tillage systems—fall moldboard plowing, fall chisel plowing and no-till. Cultivation showed the most benefits on plots that had been chisel plowed.

- Chiseled plots that were cultivated yielded 202 bushels in 1985 versus a little over 197 for the plots that weren't cultivated. In 1986, chiseled plots yielded almost 212 bushels with cultivation versus a little over 190 on plots that weren't cultivated.
- Moldboard plowed plots that were cultivated yielded nearly 208 bushels per acre in 1985 versus 202 for the plots that weren't cultivated. In 1986, cultivated plots yielded over 209 bushels per acre, less than a bushel more than plots that weren't cultivated.
- No-till plots that were cultivated yielded 174 bushels per acre in 1985 versus 158 for the plots that weren't cultivated.

While this study shows that cultivating corn when it is not necessary to control weeds may be beneficial some years with some tillage systems, researchers aren't yet ready to make a general recommendation based on two years of data. They also report that the yield difference with the three tillage systems was unexpected.

Foraging Around

By Dr. John E. Baylor
Director of Market Development
Beachley-Hardy Seed Company

Relative Feed Value What Is It?

During the past several years, animal nutritionists have added a number of new measurements to more clearly define quality in forages. These include acid detergent fiber (ADF), neutral detergent fiber (NDF), digestible dry matter (DDM), dry matter intake (DMI), and, more recently, relative feed value (RFV).

Four of these terms (ADF, NDF, DDM, and DMI) are terms commonly used by nutritionists and are understood by most forage-livestock farmers. The term relative feed value (RFV), however, is less well known and less understood by producers, especially those in the East.

RFV - What Is It?

Briefly, RFV was a term developed initially to identify quality and to price hay for marketing. It is an index which combines important nutritional factors such as potential intake and digestibility into one number for a quick, easy and effective method of evaluating nutritive value or quality. The formula for calculating RFV uses the estimated digestibility and potential intake of a forage calculated from the ADF and NDF fractions, respectively. Specifically the calculation of RFV is made by multiplying DDM and DMI and then dividing by 1.29.

The number derived from the RFV calculation is just that - a number; and is used only as an index for estimating quality of hay, haylage, or silage made from legumes, grasses, or legume-grass mixtures.

To illustrate its use, let's look at the forage quality standards, shown below, for legumes, grasses, and legume-grass mixtures as developed by the Hay Marketing Task Force of the American Forage and Grassland Council.

Average hay (quality standard 3 as shown here) has an RFV value of approximately 100. Prime or highest quality hay has an RFV value of greater than 151. In Wisconsin and Minnesota, where these standards are widely used, top dairymen insist that it takes a hay with a RFV of 150 or more to meet the nutritional needs of high-producing dairy cows.

The RFV does not include crude protein (CP), because CP is influenced by factors unrelated to those affecting relative feed value. Crude protein is, however, very important and must be considered when placing a value on forages.

Both visual appraisal and a forage test are necessary to properly assess the quality of a forage. However, tomorrow's descriptions of forage quality, especially for marketing, should include relative feed value.

"I saw the difference right away!"

Max Reapsome, Loysville, PA

That's how Max Reapsome recalls his beginnings with Fertrell fertilizer - over 12 years ago! Starting with top dressing alfalfa, Max soon began using Fertrell fertilizers more widely. Here's why: "With Fertrell the quality of my feed is better. It allows my cows to get more nutrition out of the same amount of feed or less. Plus, my herbicide use has been reduced 30 to 40 percent and I haven't needed pesticides for over 8 years! And that saves me money."

Just ask for Fertrell representative to develop a personalized fertilizer plan for you. He'll analyze your soil's elements, your crops and growing conditions, and show you how to balance all three so you too can "see the difference right away!"

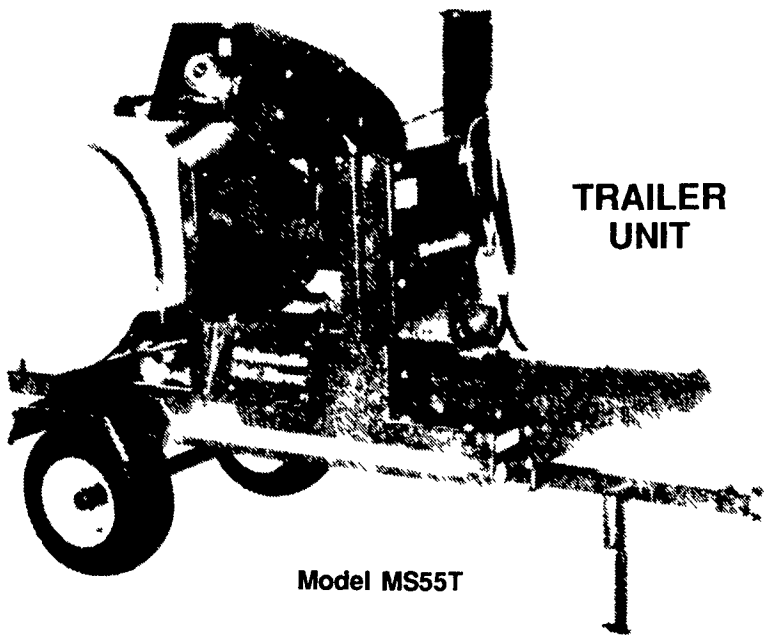
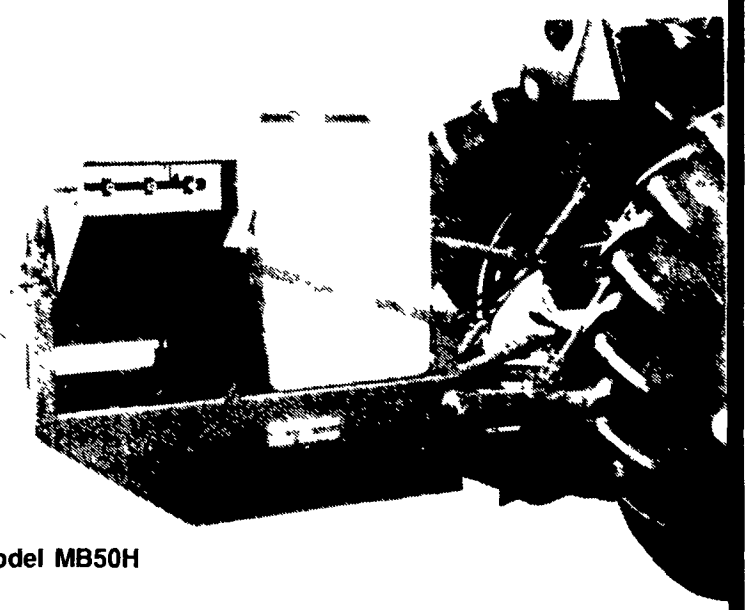
Automatic MIST SPRAYERS

Row Crops, Vegetables, Orchards And Trees



TRAILER UNIT

Model MS55T



Model MB50H

MIST SPRAYER ADVANTAGES

1. ROTARTY ATOMIZATION distributes an even size droplet spectrum that greatly improves penetration and coverage.
2. LOW FIRST COST compared with conventional sprayers with the same acreage capabilities.
3. COST LESS TO OPERATE. 50-90% savings on diluent (water or oil). Water swaths at higher speeds with less tank fillings. Save a bundle on fuel.
4. SAVE ON COSTLY CHEMICAL. More complete coverage with 25-50% less chemical compared with conventional dilute solution sprayers.
5. LOW MAINTENANCE. Simple design with few moving parts means little upkeep. No down time due to repairs or plugged nozzles.
6. MORE EFFECTIVE CONTROL as a result of fine particle efficiency through distribution of chemical.
7. COMPACT UNIT — use of smaller tractors and no booms to contend with.

Update On Varroa Mite Regulations

During the 1990 bee season, Pennsylvania had a quarantine regulation requiring all bees entering Pennsylvania to be certified free of Varroa mites. Unfortunately, probably no one realized how widespread Varroa mites were last year. Package bees shipped under mite free certification entered Pennsylvania (and other states) with Varroa mites. Varroa is present in virtually all of the package producing states. Because of the widespread distribution of Varroa, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture amended its Varroa Mite Quarantine on October 25, 1990 as follows: Package bees and queens are required to be treated with Apistan strips or a similar EPA approved miticide.

Pennsylvania entered into a cooperative agreement with Florida, New York, Maine, and New Hampshire concerning the certification of migratory honeybee colonies for interstate movement. The agreement states that all colonies must be treated annually with Apistan. Colonies must be sampled after treatment to verify its effectiveness and at 6 months to check for mite population build up. The Varroa quarantine amendment allows for migratory colonies to enter Pennsylvania in accordance with the cooperative agreement.

At the time this was written (March 14), Apistan Package strips are not available for use. By the time package shipping begins, the special package strips should be available. If they are not obtainable, our quarantine regulation will revert to the paragraph stating that all bees entering Pennsylvania must be certified free of Varroa mites.

If you receive package bees that have not been treated with Apistan Package strips in transit, you should do one of the following: 1) Confirm with the producer that the parent colonies were treated with Apistan Hive strips (which are available) before the packages were shaken, or the parent colonies were certified free of Varroa. 2) Treat the bees with Apistan Hive strips immediately after hiving, to kill any Varroa mites before brood rearing begins. 3) Request an inspection with Apistan Hive strips and sticky paper to check whether the package contained Varroa mites.

Early Spring Sources Of Pollen And Nectar

Your bees are already bringing in pollen. The plants which bloom early in the spring provide very important sources of pollen and nectar. This new bee forage usually appears weeks ahead of the major spring honey flows, prompting colonies to increase broodrearing.

Thanks to this wake-up call from the early-blooming plants, most colonies are bursting with bees by the time major nectar sources become available in the spring.

Some of these important plants are listed below:

• Skunk cabbage (Symplocarpus foetidus)-- This is the first pollen source available to the bees. It often blooms as early as February, and is usually found in wet, swampy areas. Skunk cabbage produces a very light-colored (almost white) pollen.

• Crocus-- A true sign of spring. Bees collect bright orange or golden pollen from it.

• Spring beauty (Claytonia virginica)-- Often found in woodlots, these common annual weeds bear white or rose-pink flowers. They provide bees with a good source of pinkish pollen.

• Willows (Salix spp.)-- There are many varieties of willows, including black willows, brittle willows, weeping willows and pussy willows, which vary in size from large trees to small creeping shrubs. The male and female flowers or catkins are found on separate plants, and both types secrete nectar. The male catkins provide a good source of pollen.

• Maples (Acer spp.)-- There are about 100 different species of maples distributed throughout the northern hemisphere. As a group, they are good bee plants, producing nectar freely and supplying early pollen. However, since most maples bloom early in the season (late March to April), unfavorable weather usually prevents bees from exploiting them to their full potential.

• Dandelion (Taraxacum officinale)-- These weeds can be found growing everywhere, and their bright yellow flowers can be seen throughout most of the year (even in December!!). Dandelion has long been known as an important pollen and nectar plant, especially valuable for stimulating spring broodrearing.

Pork Packer Consolidation Slows

While the names may have changed, a 1990 Iowa State University survey shows that the largest pork packers have controlled about the same percentage of slaughter capacity for the past 20 years. In 1990, IBP, ConAgra, John Morrell, and Excel held 35.6 percent of daily slaughter capacity. Since the 1970s, the top four packers (which have varied from year to year) usually average 33 percent of slaughter capacity.

The emergence of IBP and ConAgra in the mid-1980s was partially a result of upgrading older, less efficient plants previously owned by former leading packers such as Wilson, Hormel, and Oscar Meyer.

The Iowa State Survey suggests that a number of mid-sized packers such as Hatfield and Smithfield hold a substantial share of slaughter capacity. Collectively, these mid-size companies apparently hold enough leverage to keep the "big Four's" slaughter capacity in check.

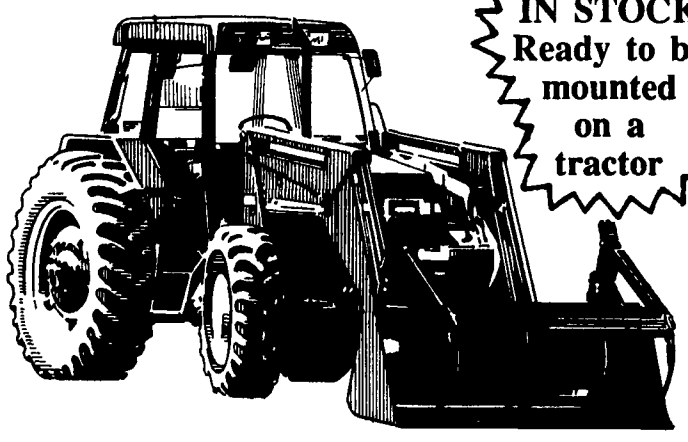
MAXXUM™

The new standard for high-performance loader work.

IN STOCK Ready to be mounted on a tractor



A new Case International MAXXUM tractor and 510 loader are perfect for loader work. Here's why:

- A standard shuttle shift transmission lets you shift from forward to reverse without clutching.
- The new 510 loader lifts 3,500 pounds up to 12 feet.
- MFD (Mechanical Front Drive) provides increased traction and stability (optional).
- Three mid-range MAXXUM models give you a choice of power, 77, 86 and 94 PTO hp (57, 64 and 70 kW).

Loading performance is just one of many reasons to own a MAXXUM tractor. Take a look at the choice of synchronized or powershift transmissions and durable Case International engines. And the choice of ROPS (roll-over protective structure), ROPS with canopy or deluxe cab...and more.

All three models are backed by the best warranty* in the business, five years or 5,000 hours, whichever occurs first. Come in to see the MAXXUM tractor line today.

*Excluding tires, which are covered by their own manufacturers' warranties. A $200 deductible applies to each repair after the first year. *JI Case Company 1989

Powerhouse savings on Case IH Reman Engines

For IH 414, 436 and 466 Tractor and Combine Premium Basic Engines

Give your tractor or combine "like-new" power with an absolute minimum of downtime with a Case IH Premium Basic Reman Engine. You won't have to wait for – or worry about – rebuilding and you'll save about one third over the cost of a new engine.

Don't confuse remanufactured engines with an engine that's just rebuilt. Where a rebuilder replaces a defective part and then reassembles using the remaining parts, Case IH reman assures you that every component is tested and refurbished or replaced.

Every reman engine is completely disassembled and cleaned of oil, grease and carbon. Then the individual components undergo extensive inspection and testing – with all substandard parts rejected.

Components that do meet our rigid specifications are reassembled by technicians who specialize in remanufacturing engines. All soft plugs, threaded plugs, seals, rod bolts, piston rings and piston pins are replaced with brand new parts. Finally, the completed engine is lubricated and tested to assure it meets or exceeds Case IH specifications.

NOW TAKING ORDERS!

New! Precision Metering For Soybeans, Milo.

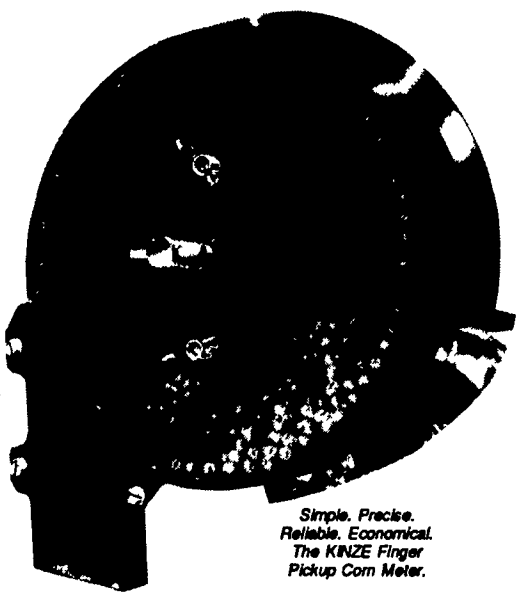
Imagine nearly perfect plateless metering for soybeans, milo/grain sorghum! Imagine the ability to plant varying seed sizes accurately — soybeans (from 2,200 to 4,000 seeds per pound); milo/grain sorghum (12,000-18,000 seeds per pound); — with the same meter and the appropriate seed disc. A precision meter with one moving part. One that costs little to maintain. One that eliminates the wasted overage and all the extra adjustments of conventional mechanical metering systems. One that doesn't require all the pumps, adjustments and maintenance of air and vacuum systems. One that's actually gentler on the seed than anything you've used before.

Meet the new KINZE® Brush-Type Seed Meter. Designed specifically to handle a wide variety of crops.

How does it work? Simply! It consists of a die-cast aluminum housing and a system of brushes that fills and gently retains individual seeds in a precision-molded seed disc with specially designed seed pockets.

As the disc rotates vertically within the housing, seeds gravitate toward the pedrimeter of the seed disc. Individual seeds are then picked up by the molded seed pocket and retained by the special brush system until they reach a point immediately above the seed tube where they are released and allowed to drop gently into the seed trench.

The result? More accuracy and control than you ever thought possible. Without all the adjustments. Without all the maintenance headaches.



Simple. Precise. Reliable. Economical. The KINZE Finger Pickup Corn Meter.

NOW from case IH Comes MAXXUM™

the 2ND ALL-NEW TRACTOR from CASE IH...

This Tractor wasn't just built for farmers, it was built by farmers...

When CASE IH was ready to market this tractor in the summer of 1988, they asked a group of farmers to tell them what they would like to see changed to make it a better tractor. Over a dozen suggestions were offered. CASE IH delayed the introduction of the MAXXUM until they had made the improvements recommended by the farmers. The result: MAXXUM. The tractor designed and built with YOU IN MIND.

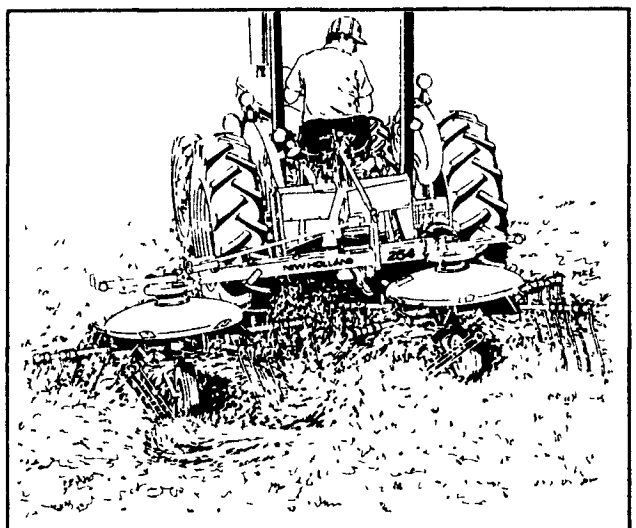
Capacity and efficiency for fast harvesting

When it comes to harvesting, you can't beat the heavy-duty performance that's built into the New Holland Model 790 forage harvester Performance starts at the cutterhead The 19 11/16-inch wide, 12-knife cutterhead delivers a fine uniform chop that's just right for most silage feeding operations And an electric clutch gives instant response and positive control on the reversing gearbox The Model 790 is available with either a 540-rpm or a 1000-rpm PTO drive

Stop in today and trade for the performance leader in harvesters—the "790" from Ford New Holland



It's a tedder! It's a rake!

It's the Model 254 rake tedder from Ford New Holland. It teds hay, rakes a swath into a windrow, rakes two windrows into one, moves crop away from trees and fences Do it all with the "254"

Stop in and we'll show how it works.

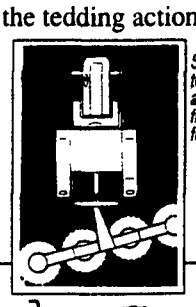
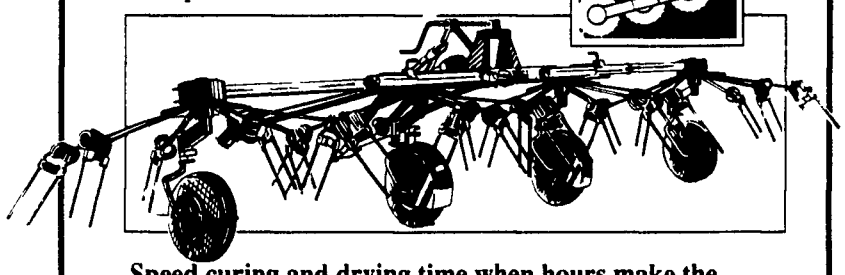
High Capacity Tedding with Gentle Rotary Action

Ted anything, from heavy sudan to freshly mown grasses, evenly and fast, with Vicon's vertical tine RS 510T trailed tedder. Working at 16' 7", it covers ground fast. Six unequal length tines per rotor improve the tedding action. You can turn the four PTO powered rotors at less than 180 RPM's with the optional speed reducing gear box. That's gentle for light fluffing with minimal leaf loss. Spring-loaded wings fold up for a compact 9'2" transport width.





Speed curing and drying time when hours make the difference. Check out the performance, and the price of the RS 510T today.

Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

S & S Silo Service Has 10 Years Experience With Shotcrete Relining

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?
PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

"MAKING GOOD SILAGE"

Probably no other ingredient fed in cattle rations today varies so much in "quality" as silage. It takes common sense, attention to details, and solid management to make good silage.

At least nine factors affect silage quality. Rather than acting independently, they interact to determine silage quality:

"The 9 Factors"

1. The Crop
2. Stage of Growth
3. Moisture
4. Fine Chopping
5. Filling, Packing and Sealing
6. Silo Structures
7. Feedout
8. Weather
9. Additives

Since 1908, SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. has been providing the Silo Structures now in demand by more and more farmers concerned about "silage quality." "Nothing keeps feed better than our poured concrete silos."

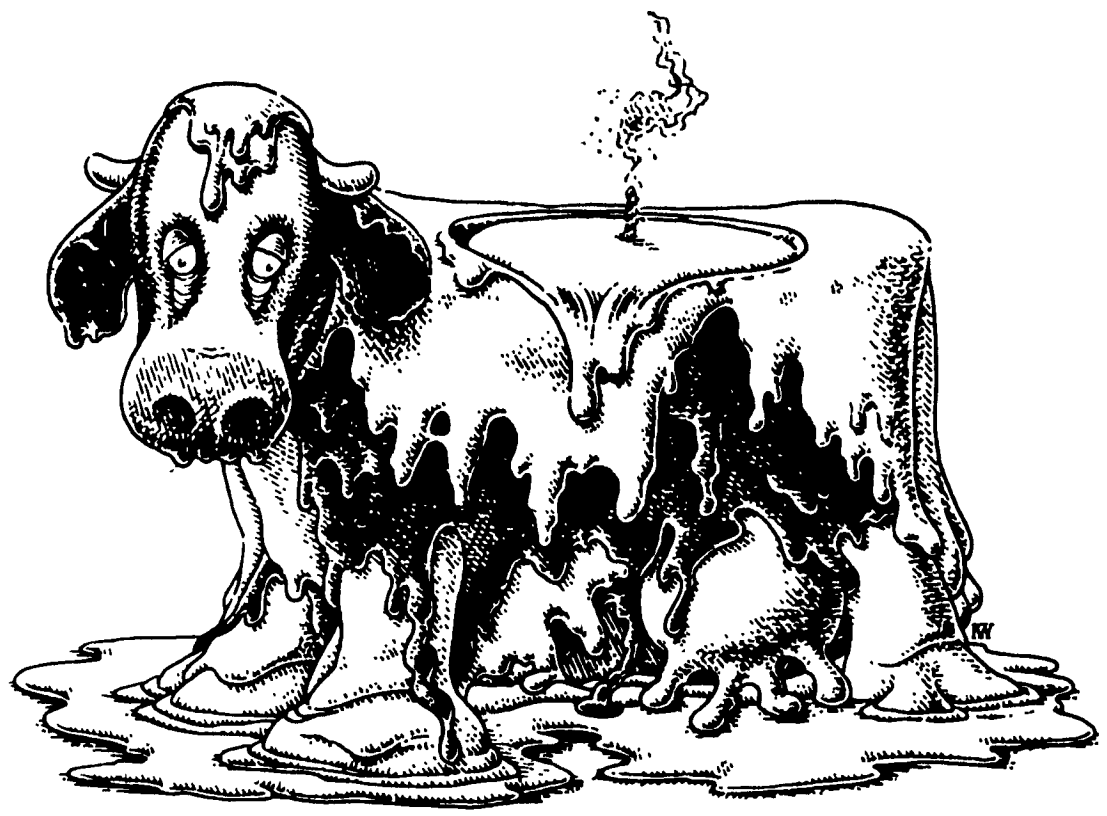
MAXI-TECH The End Of burned-out high performance cows



The special benefits of urea.

Research shows that when urea is added to a high fat milking ration rumen functions (as measured by acid balance, ammonia, and volatile fatty acids) are improved. That, of course, creates better ration efficiency. So, in addition to saving money by providing an economical non-plant protein, the urea in Maxi-Tech is making you money by increasing milk production. Urea also helps maintain normal milkfat levels.
